Weep for Ko Low
Poincare's Receivership
The Dog's Majesty
The Czar Also Did It

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company.

Ko Low, prosperous Chinese of New York, walked from the Chinese Delmonico's with a white girl on either arm. Two other Chinese shot one girl in the foot, shot Ko Low dead with various bullets, then melted into the Asiatic atmosphere of the Chinese quarter.

Ko Low's "Tong" says: "The brothers of Ko Low are anguished by the death, but can't understand it." It is just a private murder, not a Tong war, they say. White men, with their opinions of the two white girls, think it may have been providential.

So much for New York. In San Francisco members of all the Tongs met and important leaders signed a treaty of peace, agreeing not to shoot anybody until further notice.

At that moment detectives broke in, seized the treaty, saying, "We'll keep this secret, but if you do start shooting, we'll arrest everybody whose name is signed here."

They are signing such documents in Europe. If only some celestial power could take copies of the treaties and promise to lock up any statesmen starting a fight.

The plan of Monsieur Poincare is to establish a German plebiscite. Germany would live under Allied supervision, the Allies would take 26 per cent. of mining and industrial concessions. They would run Germany "as a going concern" something like a receiver appointed by the court taking over a railroad. The German receivership, including sixty million Germans, would be a considerable undertaking.

Two strikers, accused of throwing a brick at a police dog, are arrested, charged with unlawfully interfering with a policeman in discharge of his duty. The dog on duty is considered a policeman. The men interested might ask why he didn't wear a uniform. They were simply throwing a brick at a dog chasing a friend of theirs.

It is as interesting as though some Asiatic was locked up for interfering with the Rajah's executioner-elephant, trained to step on and squash skulls of criminals.

W. Z. Foster, once leader of steel strikers, is thrown out of Colorado and warned not to come back. General Hamrock, in putting out the radical labor leader, said "the dangerous radical" was put out "for the best interests of the State, and NO LAW was consulted."

Colorado has the right to accept or reject, but it is not wise for an official to exercise the fact that "no law is consulted." Better leave that to "dangerous radicals."

Lenin was put out of Russia by the Czar, or rather driven out, in exactly the same way, and spent years in Switzerland and elsewhere, but he came back. If you don't want dangerous radicals to defy the law, don't set the example and then proudly advertise it.

Last year the United States spent $600,000,000 on roads. It should spend five times as much next year and would make money on the investment.

Mr. McDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, says the words, "permanent roads," are a fallacy. He's mistaken. Caesar built roads that lasted centuries —that's permanent enough.

Judge Gary of the Steel Corporation, who manufactures cement as well as iron, could produce a reinforced road, laid in sections, that would last indefinitely.

The government should ask him to do it. Some day cheap electric heat will melt stone, producing a sort of artificial lava, to be poured out like molasses. And there you will have a road fairly permanent.

In French tests of flying machines without engines an American lands, remaining in the air on his gliding machine fifty-five seconds at one time. That is better than the flying fish or a flying squirrel can do, and it's good for a beginning. American inventors know how to do things, but their permanent does very little to encourage new ideas. The Wright brothers had to take their flying machine, and Lewis his wonderful gun, to Europe, in order to attract attention.

A wreck on the Missouri Pacific killed many. "Inevitable," say railroad representatives. They wondered what the engineer

WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Uncle Held on Charge of Murder in Tragedy Among Haverhill Relatives

Haverhill, Aug. 9.—An epic Greek tragedy was staged here today. Without knowing who Aeschylus was, Charles Dantos, seventeen-year-old high school boy, borrowed his code and died to save the honor of his sister-in-law, which had been trampled upon by the bride's uncle.

Mrs. Chris Dantos, married only a few weeks, sensed the tradition of her ancestors that a woman's honor is more precious than her life. When she learned that Charles was dead, she inhaled gas in her home on Hillside street.

There remains to be settled the differences of the husband and of the uncle accused of boasting of familiarities with Mrs. Dantos. In such matters the Greeks of old did not go to law.

Anthony opposed the marriage of his niece to Christopher. She married against his will and over his objections. Following the marriage the uncle visited the house of his niece when her husband was absent, it is charged.

Then, the husband relates, Anthony began to boast in cafes and on street corners of his relations with Mrs. Dantos. While he was contemplating a cause of reprisal, his twob rothers anticipated him. Charles and Nicholas Dantos paid a visit to Anthony.

When the conference was over Charles was found on the pavement with two bullet wounds in his abdomen. His brother helped him to his feet and they started away. Young Dantos collapsed a short distance away from the scene of the shooting.

He was taken to the Gale Hospital. With Christopher at his bedside, he died a short time later.

Christopher came home and told his bride. A short time later she was found unconscious from the gas she had taken. She was rushed to the same hospital where Charles had died.

Panhandler, Who Begs $5,000 a Year, Sent to State Farm

William Powers, self-styled "Champion Panhandler and Cadger in the World," was sentenced to the State Farm when arraigned on a vagrancy charge before Judge Farmenter in Municipal Court today.

He boasted that he made from $3,000 to $5,000 a year by begging.

Six other men and two women were arraigned with Powers in a raid on Blackstone park. The others received sentences of from one to three months.

CLEAR WHIPPLE IN PROBE OF GREENE CO.

Sherman L. Whipple, former Attorney General Herbert Parker, former Congressman Samuel L. Powers and Colonel John H. Sherburne were today absolved by Attorney-General J. Weston Allen of any suspicion of fraud or criminal responsibility in connection with the operations of the H. V. Greene Company in a letter sent by Mr. Allen to District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien.

Attorney-General Allen stated that his department had investigated the Green Company and that "no evidence of criminal fraud on the part of these men was ever found."

On the contrary, declared the Attorney-General, these gentlemen stepped into the breach to save the creditors from the machinations of the Greene corporation, and by acting as trustees without pay did actually save the investors a great deal of money.

Mr. Allen admitted that his department found that agents of the Greene Company had made misrepresentations to customers for which they could have been indicted, but that the assistant district attorney in charge of the probe decided that it would not be advisable to present the matter to the Grand Jury in the hope that later developments might reveal the source of said misrepresentations and implicate persons higher up.

HINTS DEVELOPMENTS.

"We have recently received further information," added Mr. Allen in his letter, "which when presented as evidence to the Grand Jury should, in my opinion, result in the indictment of those under whose authority the salesmen acted and from whom they received instructions.

"If you have evidence not known to this department which warrants you in proceeding against any parties you are at liberty to take action. In the event that you shall decide to present such evidence to the Grand Jury I am, of course, ready to place at your disposal any facts in my possession which in any way may have a bearing upon the matter."

Attorney-General Allen's letter to District Attorney O'Brien was in reply to a letter sent to him by Mr. O'Brien from Thomas F. Sullivan, who signed himself "Secretary of the People's Trust Company." Mr. Sullivan and his associates demanded action, Mr. Allen in his letter to Mr. O'Brien said Mr. Sullivan was not secretary to the People's Trust Com-

GENERAL R.R. STRIKE LOOMS

Cleveland, Aug. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Virtual decision was reached today by union leaders to conclude settlement of the soft coal strike with the operators who have gathered here for the joint peace conference. President John L. Lewis had assurances of operators outside the four states of their willingness to reach an agreement based on one negotiated here.

Cleveland, Aug. 9.—Chief executives of the "Big Four" transportation brotherhoods have taken action regarding the endangering of the lives of Brotherhood members through the alleged actions of armed guards in connection with the shopmen's strike and have telegraphed their members to remain away from company property if their lives are endangered.

Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, when told that 1,300 brotherhood men had quit at Joliet, Ill., said that there would be 100 more similar cases soon if working conditions at railroad yards and shops are not changed.

"The men have got to the limit of endurance through abusive treatment from guards and conditions have reached the breaking point," Mr. Stone said. "There will be 100 more similar cases soon if conditions are not changed."

REQUIRES NO APPROVAL.

Asked if the action of the Joliet men met with the approval of the brotherhood chiefs, he said: "The action does not require any approval.

"Our men are not expected to work under such conditions as now prevail at many railroad terminals. I am telling them that wherever their lives are endangered by guards

DWELLING OF THE MANNING FAMILY WHERE FLAMES TOOK TOLL OF TWO LITTLE LIVES

The wooden tenement-house at No. 54 Washington street, Charlestown, swept by fire today caused by the four Manning children playing with matches in the cellar. Two of the youngsters, Joseph, six, and Margaret, four, shown in the upper circle, died on the way to the hospital. James, nine years old, is dying at the hospital, while Robert, seven, shown in the lower circle was rescued by Patrolman John Lynch.

BRITISH SHIP ASHORE, MAY BE LOST

St. John's, N. F., Aug. 9.—The British warship Raleigh, which has been cruising off the Labrador coast with Admiral Sir William Pathenham on board, is aground at Point Amour, Straits of Belle Isle. A message said she would probably be a total wreck. All on board reached shore.

The French steam strawler Andre Pierre, stranded on the Miquelon coast in a thick fog, and reported a total loss. The crew are safe.

SUES TROLLEY ROAD FOR DAMAGES

Claiming that she was injured on April 14 when the street car she was riding in collided with a fire engine in Everett, Lena Wolfe of Malden today brought suit against the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company for $5,000 damages.

LAWRENCEMAN GETS 2,800-VOLT SHOCK

Lawrence, Aug. 9.—William Seldon, an electrician employed by the Pacific Mill power plant, was seriously injured today when he came in contact with a circuit carrying 2,300 volts. His nance is on the danger list at the hospital.

BRITISH SHIP FISH IS SOLD FOR $8.66 POUND

The Cape Cod schooner Anna, Skipper Albert Sanchez in command, came to the fish pier today with the smallest swordfish ever seen by Boston fish dealers, and it sold for the highest price per pound ever paid for fish of any kind, anywhere.

The little fish weighed only seven and one-half pounds, but was perfectly developed in every way. Skipper Sanchez declared that it was "like looking at a regular swordfish through the wrong end of the binoculars."

Dealers bid up to $60 for the fish, but it was finally bought by a member of the crew of the Anna for $65. It is understood that he later disposed of it to a man who wanted to have it stuffed and turned over to a museum.

At the first named figure the little fish brought $8.66 per pound and at the latter figure it out for yourself.

KICKED BY BLIND HORSE, BADLY HURT

Haverhill, Aug. 9.—Fred Mullen of No. 196 Broadway, teamster for Carter Russell & Co., transportation firm, is on the danger list at Gale Hospital, suffering from a broken jaw and concussion of the brain, sustained, when he was kicked by a blind horse, which he was attempting to unhitch from the wagon at the Franklin street barn.

300 ATTACK BUFFALO CAR; BEAT CONDUCTOR

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 9.—A mob of 300 men and women bombarded a car at Purdy and East Ferry streets, knocking the conductor unconscious, cutting the motorman and breaking every window in the car. The car left the barns without a police guard. Several street cars were stoned. Police used riot guns to stand off a crowd when a car was stopped by spikes in a switch.

FOUR CHILDREN BURNED, TWO DEAD IN CHARLESTOWN FIRE

BABIES PERISH AS FLAMES SWEEP THROUGH HOUSE

The children were playing with matches in the cellar of the Manning home when their clothes caught fire and the flames were communicated to the building.

"Fire Mamma, fire," screamed James, the eldest running upstairs to his mother in the kitchen.

"My God," screamed Mrs. Manning. Without stopping to look at the fire-licked kiddies screaming in the cellar the woman ran to Lynde and Union streets, to a fire alarm box. There in her excitement she became muddled and was unable to sound the alarm.

She ran back to the house, followed by shouting neighbors. The house was in flames.

James and Robert were upstairs screaming. The older boy had managed to extinguish the flames on the clothing of himself and brother but both were severely burned.

In the cellar Margaret and Joseph lay unconscious, their clothing ashes, their little bodies blackened. They died on the way to the Relief Hospital.

FATHER OVERCOME.

Doctors found James' condition so serious he was rushed there also. His name is on the danger list. Robert was treated for body burns, but left at home.

Patrolman Lynch

Firemen extinguished the blaze with a loss of $2,000.

Manning was at work in a restaurant in Charlestown when a neighbor rushed in and acquainted him with the tragedy.

He hurried to the hospital to fall and moan at the bedside of his dead children.

The hero of the fire was Patrolman John Lynch of No. 17 Dewey street, Roxbury. He broke a window in front of the Manning home and dragged out the children. His prompt action saved at least one life, the patrolman passing out Robert Manning to twelve-year-old Margaret McLaughlin.

John S. Gately, a Y. D. veteran, assisted Patrolman Lynch in removing the dying children from the smoke-filled rooms.

The McLaughlins occupy the other half of the frame dwelling. There are five children. They fled to the street when smoke poured into their home.

Neighbors criticized certain firemen who responded to the alarm pulled by a passerby who happened on Mrs. Manning endeavoring to use the fire box. They charged that firemen ignored their pleas to use a ladder and look for the children trapped in the house, giving their full attention to the basement blaze.

Mrs. Manning was prostrated in a neighbor's home following the tragedy. "My babies," she wailed.

Fate played a cruel trick on John F. McCoy of Allston when he landed a job working in the vault of the Harris Forbes Building on Federal street after being idle for weeks. His body is seen on the left after removal from the death trap, where it was found with head wrapped in his coat in a vain effort to escape the choking smoke.

Hoseman Joe Carney of Engine 25 is seen at the right getting first aid for cuts on his head, after which he insisted on returning to his post. The Haymarket square relief station ambulance broke all its previous records when Chauffeur Frank Glennon made three round trips from the hospital to the fire scene.

PROBING FIRE THAT KILLED 4 MEN

The mysterious fire in the new Harris Forbes office building at No. 24 Federal street, which brought death to four men trapped in a basement vault, was being probed today by State chemists and fire marshals.

An inquest was ordered to put witnesses under oath.

Authorities want to know what composed the patent floor varnish, the fumes of which brought death so quickly to the vault workers and caused firemen to drop like flies as fast as they stepped into the building.

State Fire Marshal George C. Neal is still at sea as to what caused the explosion.

Walter L. Wedger, State chemist, took a sample of the floor varnish, which gave off the fumes that caused suffocation, for analysis.

The dead:

John Kuhn, 21 years old, of Ogden street, Philadelphia.

John F. McCoy, 51 years old, of No. 4 Heffernan street, Allston.

William B Dempsey, about 30 years old, of Philadelphia.

John McCauley, 34 years old, of No. 93 Child street, Roxbury.

Injured fire fighters who were given first aid and remained on the scene were:

Deputy Fire Chief Edward F. Shallow was overcome by smoke.

Deputy Fire Chief Daniel Sennott was burned about the eyes and face.

Ladderman Pau Doherty was badly cut on hands by flying glass.

Hoseman Joseph Carney, Engine No. 25, cuts on head.

The four firemen at the Relief Hospital are:

Capt. Henry J. Power, Engine No. 14.

Hoseman John Allen, Engine No. 2.

Edward Toomey, Engine No. 25.

Lieut. Thomas Flanagan, Engine No. 8.

The four who lost their lives were working inside the vault preparing the surface for painting when the fire started. Other workmen were busy spreading a putty-like preparation, composed largely of highly inflammable oils, over the floor of the basement at the entrance to the vault.

CIGARETTE IS BLAMED.

The exact cause of the fire was not learned. It is reported, however, that some workman dropped a match or cigarette butt onto the newly-surfaced basement floor.

In less than five seconds the entire compound was ablaze. A thick cloud of smoke heavy, black and choking, billowed up from the floor and rolled into the vault.

Inside the vault, the four workmen, painting and scraping the walls, looked up to see the doorway barred by a sheet of flame.

The red glare of the flames was almost instantly obscured by heavy smoke clouds that rolled through the open door and filled every corner of the steel room.

Frantically the men seized their coats and wrapped them about their heads, in fruitless efforts to prevent the poisonous smoke from reaching their lungs. One or two are thought to have made attempts to dart out the vault door. To do so, however, involved crossing a mass of flames some twenty feet in diameters which blazed with terrific heat and intensity. Escape through the doorway was an impossibility.

FOUND, HEADS IN COATS.

One by one the trapped workmen dropped to the floor, overcome by the smoke. Firemen found them later, each with his head wrapped in a coat, each stretching helpless hands towards the doorway.

Charles Gustafson, of No 34 Somerset street, foreman of the painters, was outside of the vault when the fire started. He ran to the street and turned in a fire alarm. Then he turned and tried to make his way through the basement to help his fellows.

Captain Power of engine No. 4 was the first to go in. He was followed by Hosemen Allen and Toomey and Lieutenant Flanagan.

Suddenly Gustafson noticed that Captain Power had stayed long in the vault without emerging. Pressing the lapels of his coat to his nostrils, the foreman ran again through the basement and into the vault. As he entered he stumbled over a man's body. Picking it up, he staggered to the street. The man was Capt. Power, unconscious from the smoke.

LOSES LIFE SAVINGS TO CONFIDENCE MEN

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 9.—Wasil Wsaxelk, a cobbler of No. 28 Cross street, Central Falls, has lost the savings of a lifetime, amounting to $6,500. Two youths inveigled him to place the money in a strong box, supposedly with $1,200 of their own. They gave him a key. When he visited the box all he found was a $1 bill and a note reading: "Buy yourself a feed, you'll need it."

ROXBURY MAN LOCKS SELF IN FLAT TO ESCAPE WIFE HE FEARS

TELLS OF ATTEMPT ON LIFE

Mate Angry Upon Learning of Lapse in Insurance Policy, He Declares

The reporter knocked at the door of the apartment of George M. White, at No. 1 Greenville street, Roxbury.

Cracked with terror, the voice of White came through:

"Go away. Don't try to come in, Mary! If you do, I'll jump from the window!"

The reporter attempted to explain who he was. White refused to open the door, insisting that it was a trick on the part of his wife to get in and kill him.

For four days White has kept himself barricaded in his flat, denying himself to all visitors, declining to admit even a policeman who called to question him.

PRISONER SINCE FRIDAY.

He has kept himself a prisoner since Friday. On that day the affair which keeps him in mortal fright came to the attention of the police when White, battered and bruised, floundered into the Woburn Court and asked for a warrant for the arrest of his wife, who was formerly Miss Mary Foss of No. 153 Main street, Hartford.

The warrant was issued after White had told this story:

"We had separated. About two weeks ago she came back and asked me if I was paying the premiums on my insurance. I told her I had let my policy lapse. She was angry for a while, and then she seemed to relent, and suggested a reconciliation. I agreed and she proposed a little fishing trip to celebrate.

"She selected Spot Pond. When we got there on Friday she led me to the top of Pickerel Rock. It's a lonely spot. You have to walk a mile through the woods to reach it. We threw our lines out. After a while Mary thought she felt a nibble. 'Look over,' she told me. 'Look over and see if I haven't got a bite. The water is clear.' I bent over. The next thing I knew I felt a violent push and I went whirling into the water. I heard her yell, 'Let your insurance lapse, will you?'

DEMANDS HER ARREST.

"I managed to get to shore. The water was quite shallow. When she saw that I had escaped she said, 'Damn it, aren't you dead? I'll get you yet.' And she will. She'll kill me. She has no heart. I want her arrested."

The story of his romance with Mary Foss is almost as weird as the recital of the alleged fishing trip. He claims he met the girl through an advertisement in a matrimonial paper, and they were married in Roxbury last year. Five months ago, he said, his wife told him that she had been married before. Her first husband turned up and she returned to him. Yet he pined for her and began meeting her occasionally.

He showered her with gifts—a ring valued at $150 and cash at various times totaling $1,000. Then he told her about the insurance lapse, and she proposed the fishing trip.

"Let me in," said the reporter. "I only want to help you to find her."

Through the keyhole came back the reply:

"You can't fool me. She said she and the man would get me. She has sent you to get me. You can't come in."

LEARNED OF THREE DEATHS THROUGH BABY

Visalia, Cal., Aug. 9.—That Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Highland and their infant child of Los Angeles had been drowned at Three Rivers, thirty miles east of here, was disclosed when passing motorists observed a lad of three years playing alone in an automobile. They asked him where his mother was.

"In the water," he replied. "Daddy in water; baby in water."

Further questioning disclosed that the baby had fallen into the Kaweah River, the frightened mother leaped in to save the child. Unable to swim, she cried for help and the father, who was working on the automobile, jumped in, in an effort to save his wife and child.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Highland were recovered.

MYSTERY MAN ON STRANGE VISITS

Who is the mysterious visitor whose shadow has hovered over the Gleason of No. 153 Lenox street, East Boston, for a year? He has just paid another of his nocturnal visits.

The strange intruder, making his second visit within a year, chose an early morning hour for his call. James Gleason, seventeen, sleeping in a chamber on the second floor, was awakened by the creaking of the floor in an adjoining room. The boy, trembling, started and then relaxed, feigning sleep. Memory of the prior visit of the stranger kept him cowering under the sheets. He knew the footsteps were not those of either of his sisters, Helen, twenty-three, and Christine, twenty-five.

HEARD FOOTSTEPS.

The footsteps came nearer. Soon the door was opened stealthily and Jimmie could discern, in the dark, the form of a man. His heart almost stopped beating as the man approached his bed. The room was in utter darkness. The visitor used no flashlight and did not even pause to strike a match. Yet he seemed familiar with the geography of the room and made his way unhesitatingly, yet stealthily, past Jimmie's bed.

As Jimmie fought with his impulses to refrain from yelling aloud, the man bent over. The boy could feel his breath. It was the hot breath of a man who was laboring under some great emotion. The thought came to Jimmie that this man, who had stood in the background of his and his sister's lives like a ghost, was about to kill him.

Then he would leave the apartment to himself, and he would enter the rooms occupied by Helen and Christine.

The thought was so horrid that Jimmie opened his eyes and made a noise. The man gripped him by the shoulder with a strength that brought a gasp from Jimmie. He shook him viciously and flung him back into bed. The thought flashed through Jimmie's mind again as the man ran out of the room:

"He's going to Christine and Helen's rooms."

Frightened as he was, he staggered into the room occupied by his sisters.

WOKE UP SISTERS.

"Christine! Helen! Wake up! The man is here again! Wake up!"

Nothing his brother-in-law-to-be, the lad collapsed. Helen rushed to the telephone and called Station 7, Dudley, without waiting to put on clothe herself, ran into the street, screaming. From down the street came a policeman. In a short time half a dozen policemen were listening to the story of the terrified girl.

One of the policemen went to the house. A moment later there was a shot. A man ran out of the house. He disregarded the orders of the other officers to stop.

Half a doezn shots were fired in the chase that followed, but the stranger eluded the police.

BLAME WRECK TO STONES ON TRACK

By Associated Press.

Worcester, Aug. 9.—Preliminary reports of the investigators of the disastrous wreck on the Boston & Albany Railroad, here yesterday afternoon, are to the effect that stones on the rails, in what is known as the "Deep Cut" nearly a mile from the point where the locomotive even turned, was the direct cause of the tragedy. State Detective Edward J. McCarthy stated today that pieces of crushed rock found on both sides of the rails at that point left no doubt that more than one stone was on the rails.

While rumors are plentiful that this was the deliberate work of men sympathising with the striking rail way shopmen, Detective McCarthy is of the opinion that the stones were either thrown by boys from the top of the cut, which is forty feet deep at one point, or else were loosened in some manner from the walls of the cut and fell to the tracks.

BOYS MAY BE TO BLAME.

Detective McCarthy is endeavoring to ascertain if any boys were seen in the vicinity just previous to the accident. A track walker had passed the scene a half hour before the accident and reports the rails were clear at that time.

Fireman H. E. Russell of Ashland is the only person dead.

Engineman Robert C. McDonald, also of Ashland, was not expected to live through the night but he still clings to life and this morning roused into semi-consciousness at times. Efforts to secure from him a statement as to whether he saw an obstruction upon the track were unavailing, however, and he lapsed into unconsciousness before any questions could be answered. His wife, who is soon to become a mother, reached the bedside today.

First reports of the accident placed the blame on a faulty air-brake connecting rod beneath the engine. This rod snapped off or became disconnected when the engineer tried to put on the brakes, it is thought, and caught in one of the yard switches, derailing the engine and swinging it over on its side with great force.

TELEPHONE GIRL HEROINE.

To Miss Marion Hunt, clerk-telephone girl in the Ray White, Peavey & Dexter Company, sleeping car house, alongside the Boston & Albany Railroad tracks, goes all the credit for the prompt summoning of doctors, nurses and police and firemen.

Her call to police headquarters resulted in two ambulances and two physicians being sent immediately to the scene. She was the first to use its emergency call to every physician and nurse in the city as well as summon the four ambulances, scores of medical men and women immediately responded.

pany, but presided at a meeting of twenty-seven persons in his own home, and probably served as secretary at that meeting. The letter:

"Boston, August 8, 1922.

"Hon. Thomas C. O'Brien,
"Hon. Thomas C. O'Brien, District Attorney for the Suffolk District Court House, Boston, Mass.:

"Dear Sir—I duly received your recent letter under date of July 22, accompanying which you transmitted for my attention a letter to which you refer as anonymous, but which purports to be from one Thomas F. Sullivan, who signs himself as secretary, not of the People's Trust Company, but of twenty-seven persons who met at his home and to whom he refers as stockholders of the People's Trust Company. I assume that he was elected secretary of the meeting to which he refers.

"At the meeting it appears that a resolution was adopted, calling upon you to investigate at once charges against H. V. Greene, Sherman L. Whipple, Samuel L. Powers, Herbert Parker and John H. Sherburne, involving alleged criminal fraud and conspiracy, and you are requested to present evidence of such crime before the Grand Jury of Suffolk County.

"I assume that the writer of the letter had reference to the First People's Trust, as, upon investigation, I find there is no corporation under the name of the People's Trust doing business in this Commonwealth.

INVESTIGATION BEGUN.

"Some time ago I began an investigation of the financial condition of the Commercial Finance Corporation, the First People's Trust and the Mutual Finance Corporation, because of complaints that were received and on account of statements which appeared in the press in relation to extended sales of the stock of these companies on the partial payment plan by salesmen employed by the H. V. Greene Company. It was claimed that misrepresentations had been made to purchasers by the salesmen of the H. V. Greene Company in connection with the sale of these stocks.

"In the course of this investigation I was informed by John H. Sherburne, Samuel L. Powers and George A. Baldwin that they had been appointed a stockholders' protective committee, and that in the interest of the stockholders they had caused an audit to be made of the business of the Mutual Finance Corporation and the Commercial Finance Corporation, and, to a more limited extent, of the First People's Trust. At my suggestion, a summary or report, based upon this audit, was submitted to me for examination.

"It was not possible, without employing an expert accountant to check up the results of the examination of the books to verify the conclusions reached in the report with respect to the financial condition of these companies, but it sufficiently appeared from the examination of the report submitted to me that there was a small balance of income in excess of operating expenses and dividend requirements in the First People's Trust, and that there was an impairment of the capital of the two other companies, the Mutual Finance Corporation and the Commercial Finance Corporation.

BELIEVED SOLVENT.

"At that time I was further advised by William H. Hitchcock, Esq., a former Assistant Attorney General under my predecessor in office, and then counsel for the First People's Trust, that, from his knowledge of the business of that company, it was in a solvent condition. At that time he was elected one of the trustees, a position which he has since held. I enclose for your information a copy of a letter which I have received from him since the receipt of your communication as to the present status of the First People's Trust.

"With respect to the Mutual Finance Corporation and the Commercial Finance Corporation, I was assured by the stockholders' committee that no further offering of stock of these corporations would be made by the H. V. Greene Co., or its salesmen, and that H. V. Greene had transferred certain assets to the committee to secure the investors in the stock of the two corporations against loss due to impairment of capital. So far as I have been able to ascertain, from that date no stock in these corporations has been offered for sale.

"The original investigation tended to show that in some instances misrepresentations were made by the agents of the H. V. Greene Company for which in my opinion they could be indicted. It did not seem advisable, however, to place these cases before the grand jury at that time because it was the opinion of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the investigation, in which opinion I shared, that further developments would probably enable us to trace these misrepresentations to their source, and to show that they emanated from persons higher up. We have recently received further information which, when presented as evidence to a grand jury, should, in my opinion, result in the indictment of those under whose authority the statements acted and from whom they received their instructions.

INDICTMENTS POSSIBLE.

"From the examination which I have made, based upon the report of the audit, and conferences with the stockholders' protective committee, it further appeared that the most serious loss which the Mutual Finance Corporation and Commercial Finance Corporation had sustained was unquestionably due to certain loans that were made by them to the Massachusetts Motors, Inc., which corporation was afterwards petitioned in bankruptcy.

"In view of the information which I obtained with respect to the loans made to this company, I caused an investigation to be made into the relations between these corporations and the persons in control of their management. The facts disclosed by this angle of the investigation, as well as any facts relating to the sale of stock in the so-called Greene companies and the Massachusetts Motors, Inc., in my opinion warrant their presentation to the Grand Jury; but, because of the length of time that such presentation would take, I am determined to present the evidence with respect to these companies to a special Grand Jury, for the authority for the summoning of which I had petitioned the Legislature.

"This general authority has since been granted and I am asking the Chief Justice of the Superior Court for authority to summon a special Grand Jury under this statute.

EXONERATES FOUR.

"No evidence of criminal fraud on the part of Sherman L. Whipple, Samuel L. Powers, Herbert Parker and John H. Sherburne, the persons named in the communication accompanying your letter to me, has appeared at any time during the investigation which has been made by this department.

"If further facts shall be obtained upon further investigation or in the trial of the civil suit now pending, in which the rights of the stockholders from now on appear to be adequately protected by the injunction which was recently issued, which discloses criminal liability on the part of any of the persons named, I shall, of course, present such evidence to the Grand Jury.

"If you have evidence not known to this department, which warrants you in proceeding against any of the parties, you are, of course, at liberty to take appropriate action, and, in the event that you shall decide to present such evidence to the Grand Jury, I am, of course, ready to place at your disposal any facts in my possession which in any way may have any bearing upon the matters which you desire to present to the Grand Jury. Very truly yours,

"J. WESTON ALLEN,
"Attorney-General."

FRENCH LOSE ON SALE OF U. S. ARMY STOCK

Paris, Aug. 9.—American army stocks bought by France in 1918 have been resold, according to newspaper accounts, at slight loss. The French government paid $400,000,000 for the stocks and resold at about $300,000,000, in addition to utilizing part of the goods for the French army. Payment to America for the goods is due August 1, 1923.

GUARD AGAINST BOOTLEGGERS IN NEWPORT

Newport, Aug. 9.—A heavy guard from the Atlantic fleet, now anchored in the outer harbor, has been thrown around this place to guard the hundreds of sailors granted shore leave from bootleggers.

Armed sailors and marines are on duty all over the city, patrolling the streets with orders to arrest anyone found engaged in selling or giving away liquor.

The fleet comprises battleships, cruisers, mine-sweepers, destroyers, submarines, medical staff and auxiliaries of all types. Rear Admiral Archibald H. Scales is in command in the absence of Admiral H. Jones and Vice-Admiral John D. McDonald.

LAW ENFORCEMENT WILSON'S SLOGAN

"Law enforced from the top down" is the slogan of Harold D. Wilson of Somerville, former state prohibition director, who has filed papers for the Republican nomination for attorney-general. "I am seeking the Republican nomination for attorney-general on the assumption that the electorate desires in its public officials men only that has stood the acid test, courage to carry on in the enforcement of any law and ability or adaptability to the office sought," the candidate says in announcing his candidacy.

Mr. Wilson says that he does not stand to enter into any personal controversy with any other candidate but will advocate the reformation of our present "antiquated, prevalent burdensome, cumbersome workable legal procedure."

was thinking about when he passed the danger signal. He may have been worrying about an engine not properly cared for because of the strike and dangerous to handle.

If the shopmen's strike lasts, the engineers may be compelled to go out, to protect their own lives, and the public's.

Investigating the cost of gasoline, the Senate is told by "an expert" that gasoline manufacturers have been "losing money ever since 1920."

That's puzzling. Since 1920 gasoline has sold at from 25 to 32 cents. Before the automobiles created a demand, making high prices easy, gasoline used to sell for six cents a gallon.

DAUGHTERS OF STEWART GET $4,000,000

Riverhead, L. I., Aug. 9.—More than $4,000,000 has been ordered turned over to the daughters of the late John E. Stewart, founder and president of the Stewart Manufacturing Company and the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Company, by Surrogate Robert S. Pelletreau of Suffolk County.

He directed the order to Leander H. LaChance and Martin Taylor, guardians of Mrs. Marion Stewart Honeyman. They are said to be incompetent. They were ordered to turn over to Mrs. Honeyman money and securities amounting to $2,106,337, less $50,000 for disbursements and commissions.

Surrogate Pelletreau also signed an order directing Taylor and LaChance, as guardians of the late Jean Stewart, Mr. Stewart's younger daughter, to turn over to Administrators of her estate, the Suffolk National Bank of Riverhead and Robert B. Honeyman, Sr., $1,874,982.39, less $60,000 allowed the guardians for disbursements and commissions.

Both Mr. Taylor and Mr. LaChance objected to the signing of the order protesting that the surrogate had no authority to direct the guardians to turn over the assets of the estate until the signing of the final decree. The accountings of both shares of the estate will be contested on the ground of alleged shrinkage. The hearings for the contesting of the accounts will be held September 25.

AMERICAN MISSING IN BALLOON RACE

Geneva, Aug. 9. (By International News Service).—Joy over the possibility of the United States winning the James Gordon Bennett cup for international balloon racing was tempered today by anxiety over the fate of Ralph Honeywell, pilot of the American civilian balloon. Honeywell and M. Demuyter, pilot of a Belgian balloon, were still unaccounted for today. It was feared they had been carried out over the Black sea, the flooded waters rose round the building.

State Inquiry on Worcester Wreck

The Department of Public Utilities has assigned Locomotive Inspector T. A. Connor and Railroad Inspector L. H. McLain to determine the cause of the railroad wreck in Worcester.

Chief Inspector Henry W. Seward said the men had been sent to Worcester with instructions to make a thorough examination of the tracks and the engine and to question witnesses in order to ascertain whose negligence caused the disaster.

MEARNS IN JAIL 3 YEARS FOR CONTEMPT

Washington, Aug. 9.—William A. Mearns, former member of the banking firm of Mearns, Lemon & Company, and former president of the International Sales Corporation, who was adjudged in contempt by Justice Jennings Bailey in Equity Court on March 24, 1919, and ever since has been confined in the district jail, has petitioned the court for his release. The confinement came about as a result of the alleged refusal of Mearns to turn over to receivers of the International Sales Corporation, $3,378.30, as ordered by Justice Bailey. Mearns now informs the court that he did not have the money.

they should go home and stay there. They are justified in remaining away from railroad company property under existing conditions."

W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, when told of the Joliet walkout of brotherhood members, and President Stone's stand on the situation, concurred in the position taken by the engineers' chief.

Chicago, Aug. 9. (By the Associated Press).—The threatened walkout of "Big Four" Brotherhood men—engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen—on the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railroad began early today.

Men gathered at the terminals but refused to turn a wheel unless the soldiers, called as the result of the Monday outbreak in which two men were killed and Sheriff Newkirk dangerously wounded, were immediately withdrawn.

The railroad does a heavy short haul freight business as an outer belt line of the Chicago switching district and handles the bulk of yard traffic touching the steel mills.

Four striking railway shopmen were indicted at Columbus, Ga., for assault with intent to murder in connection with an attack on a party of negro employes.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Clerks, freight handlers and station men, who are not on strike, have been ordered to "stay away from their usual places of employment whenever their lives are endangered, either by armed guards or defective railroad equipment," the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, freight handlers, station and express employes announced today in a statement to the Associated Press.

Coolidge Declares Public Will Be Protected

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 9.—Congressional action as a means of ending the coal and rail strikes was the solution offered by Vice-President Calvin Coolidge on arriving here for the American Bar Convention.

"There is but one solution to industrial difficulties when the interested parties can't agree, and that's arbitration. When that fails, as it has in both the coal and rail strikes, and the public generally is affected, then it is a problem to be dealt with by Congress," Mr. Coolidge declared, adding:

"The people of the United States can be assured that the President will take all necessary steps to insure sufficient production and distribution of coal. Today the coal miners and operators and the railroad workers and owners represent the minority—the great American public the majority."

Washington, Aug. 9.—Formal protest against the reported importation of strikebreakers direct from Europe by some of the railroads affected by the shopmen's strike was made to Secretary of Labor Davis today.

Bert M. Jewell, strikers' leader, demanded investigation by the Labor Department. He also cabled officials of the British labor movement in London asking an inquiry.

Jewell asserted he had authentic reports that the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad had recently secured laborers direct from Europe. He charged violation of the alien contract labor law.

N. Y. SHOPMEN OPPOSE PLAN OF HARDING

New York, Aug. 9.—Twenty-five thousand rail shopcrafts workers today sent a telegram to B. M. Jewell at Washington refusing to accept President Harding's proposal to submit the seniority question to the labor board.

The telegram read:

"In behalf of 25,000 striking railway shopmen in the New York district we indorse your stand in refusing to accept the compromise proposition of President Harding. Located in a district exposed to the poison gas attack as represented by the lying propaganda of the railway executives our members have stood the attack without faltering and the morale of the strikers is perfect.

"Many of the strikers are ex-service men who fought under the Stars and Stripes for democracy in the late war. Those men have witnessed our so-called American railway executives hire cheap Chinese and Hindu labor to try and break the strike and under no circumstances will these former soldiers agree to allow this conglomeration of un-skilled foreign workmen to be considered as favored employes of the railroads in order to gratify the autocratic desires of the American railway kaisers for a condition of industrial slavery for railway employes.

"Let us assure you again we want no compromise and urge that the fight be fought to a finish right now on its merits and the present administration in control of our government be forced to show whether it stands for real Americanism or the brand of Americanism represented by a few hard boiled railroad officials who would wreck our entire country in their lust for power."

PREPARE TO RESUME COAL MINING

Harrisburg, Ill., Aug. 9.—Fires have been started in every coal mine in this section, and mules are being lowered into shafts today.

Preparations are being made by practically all operators in Williamson County to resume mining, and it is the belief of both miners and operators in this section that the coal strike will be called off within forty-eight hours.

W. Z. FOSTER SCORES COLORADO OFFICIALS

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 9.—William Z. Foster, a leader of the last steel strike, spoke to 300 persons here and attacked Colorado authorities who drove him from that State Sunday. Foster bitterly assailed Adjutant-General Hamrock of Colorado, who, he said, ordered his arrest as a "dangerous radical" and alluded to the officers who escorted him to the Wyoming border as "constabulary gunmen."

MORAL SUPPORT FOR U. S. MINERS VOTED

Frankfort-on-Main, Aug. 9 (By International News Service).—Frank Hodges, secretary of the British Federation of Miners, today was elected general secretary of the International Organization of Coal Miners. The delegates expressed themselves in favor of moral support for the American strikers.

BLOW UNMASKS YOUNG GIRL AS GANG CHIEF

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—A good stiff punch, landed squarely on the nose, has ended the eight-year career of "John McConnell," now revealed as Florence Gray, Twelfth and Mount Vernon streets, this city.

"John" or Florence, is known locally as leader of the "Iron Gang," ash wagon driver "Battling Kid" McConnell, chauffeur of a five-ton motor truck, and breaker of women's hearts. Also "John" once swam the Delaware and at another time teamed with a woman in a trapeze performance on the stage.

But it is all ended.

It seems that "John" had a weakness for ice cream and while engaged in eating that delicacy in a neighborhood soft drink place, was suddenly attacked by Charles Edgar Weaver, one of the members of the "Iron Gang" whom "he" had frequently defeated in pitched battle.

Weaver landed several good ones before "John" could get into action and a wicked swing to the nose sent "John" to the floor for the count. The effect was magical.

The "hard boiled" gang leader suddenly vanished and the eternal feminine asserted itself with the result that she was taken into custody by the police and hailed before a magistrate.

When facts in the case were revealed Weaver was placed on probation for a year—a much astonished youth.

Florence Gray is the grand-daughter of James Gray, a retired lawyer of No. 1112 Green street. Her mother died when the girl was two years old. While on a housebout party, Florence donned trousers, and liked them so well that she insisted on becoming a "boy" for a while at least. Ultimately she made it her permanent costume. To add to the effect she had the initials "J. McC" tattooed on her arms and took a course as a mechanic in an automobile school.

In the meantime her father married again and settled in Asheville, N. C.

30 Photos of Max Give Mathilde Courage

Paris, Aug. 9.—Thirty photographs of Max Geer, in all kinds of costumes and poses, are placed around the apartment of Mathilde McCormick, the Chicago heiress, to console her as she argues with her father, Harold F. McCormick, who is trying to block the girl's marriage to the riding master.

Mathilde is determined to go to the altar with Oser in the Autumn, regardless of parental objections. Her departure for Switzerland has been postponed indefinitely. Mathilde has suffered a breakdown due to the long arguments with her family over marriage plans. She remained indoors all day Tuesday.

McCormick refuses to discuss his reported engagement to Mme. Ganna Walska, the Polish singer.

REBELS DRIVEN FROM LIMERICK COUNTY

Dublin, Aug. 9 (By International News Service).—All Limerick County has been cleared of Republican irregular troops, it was reported today from the battle area. The irregulars formerly in Limerick have been driven westward and southward.

Only County Cork is now controlled by the irregulars, as well as most of County Kerry.

It was reported today that the Dail Eireann would be postponed.

Sunken Ship Blocks Entrance to Cork City

Dublin, Aug. 9 (By the Associated Press).—A trans-Atlantic steamship arriving here today reported that, upon reaching Queenstown harbor yesterday, her officers were advised that a vessel had been sunk across the narrowest part of the River Lee, thus blocking entrance to Cork City. By this means the Irregulars holding the city, it was said, sought to prevent repetition of the Provisional Government's coup in landing troops from the sea at Tralee.

SHOWS STAGE MONEY, IS ROBBED

William Marble's a city slicker. He annoints his head with hair tonic and carries a roll of stage money about the thickness of an elephant's ankle.

Will works in the Rowes Wharf barber shop and lives at No. 18 Herbert street, Lynn.

After eating a "hot dog" in a Liberty street, Lynn, dog cart in the early morning hours Will pulled out his huge roll of stage money from the outside of which he peeled off a real dollar bill.

Three villains saw Will do that.

Twenty minutes after Will left the dog cart his straw hat was cruelly crushed with a blackjack that also indented Will's skull and dropped him unconscious in a darkened street. When Will came to his bogus roll with $17 real money had vanished.

Later today police arrested Mike J. Connor, known as "Bangor Mickey"; Fred A. Fullan and Lester M. Newcomb. They were arraigned in court on a charge of robbery.

POLITICAL NOTES

Rival candidates for the Governorship nomination are expected to debate from the same platforms in Lynn tomorrow night before the Ex-Service Men's Association. More than 3,000 veterans are expected to turn out to hear Joseph R. Ely, candidate for the Democratic nomination, and Governor Cox, who is seeking the Republican nomination.

* * *

Joseph E. Warner, who seeks the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, said today:

"Mr. Fuller's statement that he has the endorsement of Governor Cox, Senator Lodge, President Allen of the Senate and every member of the Governor's Council, is an unqualified falsehood. I challenge him to show proof of his alleged indorsements." Lieutenant-Governor Fuller replied: "The gentlemen so assured me."

* * *

Former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier today filed with the Secretary of State a petition containing nearly 22,000 certified names of voters, asking for a referendum November 7 on the law which makes it compulsory for a district attorney to be a lawyer.

Pelletier claims the law was made expressly to keep him from holding his office. He says he is getting thousands of more names.

* * *

Attorney General J. Western Allen, opening his four-day tour of Cape Cod in his gubernatorial fight spoke at Brockton today. He said in part: "The fight for decent government is not won. It has merely shifted to the political field. The District Attorney who was deposed is again seeking office. As long as I remain in public office I shall fight these men without regard to party affiliation.

"The victory in Suffolk County has been too dearly won to hand the office back to Mr. Pelletier or anyone else who is supported, as he was, by Mr. Innis, the friend of my opponent.

"I would rather be defeated than nominated under conditions which would put me under obligations to the Innis machine."

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien's opening gun of the campaign for nomination for the office he now holds will be fired tonight from the Parkman bandstand on Boston Common.

MARILYNN, DENYING PARTIES, SAYS SHE NEVER HEARD OF WARD

Refuses Movie Offers and Will Come to Boston to Keep Contract With Ziegfeld

By BERT FORD.

The outstanding developments today in the Ziegfeld-Miller-Pickford fuss were:

Telegram from Marilynn Miller, now Mrs. Jack Pickford, that she stands by and is ready to repeat every word of her serial interview published exclusively in the Boston American.

Announcement that she received a flattering offer to go into the movies before she went West, that still greater inducements have been made to her since she reached Los Angeles, and that a London producer has also offered her a tempting stage contract.

WILL STICK TO "SALLY."

Assurance from her that she has rejected all offers in order to live up to her contract with Ziegfeld, which calls for her appearance in the star role of "Sally" when it reopens in Boston on Labor Day.

Denial by Florenz Ziegfeld Jr., just back from Europe, that he ever talked to any newspaper representative that Marilynn and Geneva Mitchell were entertained at parties staged in New York by Walter S. Ward, son of the millionaire baker who is accused of murdering Clarence Peters, a former bluejacket from Haverhill.

Further denial by Mr. Ziegfeld that he ever gave out an interview in Paris in which he criticised or even so much as named Jack Pickford.

STANDS BY INTERVIEW.

Marilynn's telegram sent from Los Angeles where she and Jack are enjoying their honeymoon reads:

Los Angeles, Cal., August 8, 1922.

"Boston American:

"Every statement I have made in my series of interviews is the absolute truth and he (Ziegfeld) dare not deny them. As for using the name 'Marilynn Miller' Pickford on theater signs and posters, I have never thought of such a thing. 'Marilynn Miller' is my business name and I shall always use it. I have never heard of any such man as Walter S. Ward. I have never attended parties with Geneva Mitchell. I know nothing about domestic relations of Flo and Billie and care less. I am not interested in them at all. Having a wonderful time here. Best regards. MARILYNN MILLER."

MAY ENTER FILMS LATER.

The writer learned two months ago that Marilynn Miller had received an offer to become a film star, but was not permitted to make the fact public until now. The name of the producer who made the offer is withheld. He is reported to have long considered Marilynn as a promising subject for screen fame.

It is predicted by her intimates that she will try her luck in screendom as soon as her contract with Mr. Ziegfeld expires. Now that she has become a member by marriage of one of the foremost "movie" families, fans consider her adoption of a film career a sort of automatic sequence.

Marilynn and Jack plan to start East on Sunday, August 20. They both have business to attend to in New York before coming to Boston for the re-opening of "Sally." Jack has just completed "Garrison's Finish," his first picture film since the death of Olive Thomas, his first wife, three years ago, and is preparing for "Six Cylinder Love."

ZIEGFELD'S STATEMENT.

At York Harbor, Me., today, Mr. Ziegfeld gave the following statement to the Boston American:

"A few days ago I gave a brief written statement to the York Harbor correspondent of a Boston newspaper, not the Boston American. I made no mention of the Kabatznick affair or any other affair or party in that statement, nor did I claim that Marilynn Miller and Geneva Mitchell had been entertained by Walter S. Ward of New York. I never mentioned Ward's name.

"When that interview was printed I was credited with things that had not entered my mind. I was accused of saying things I had not sponsored. It was the same in Paris. Reporters besieged my apartments in Paris and tried to make me discuss Jack Pickford. I declined to say a single word about him, but as a result of the cables of ambitious correspondents I was branded as Mr. Pickford's accuser.

NO GRUDGE AGAINST JACK.

"It is all a most annoying and unjust. If what I really said had been cabled there would not have been any controversy. I have no grudge or personal feelings against Mr. Pickford.

"Soon after 'Sally' opened in Boston Marilynn and Edward Royce, the producer, and I were conversing. The subject of Marilynn's marriage came up. Mr. Royce said it would be a pity for Marilynn to marry, as she was meeting with phenomenal success. Marilynn said there was no danger of her marrying. Then her sudden change of mind.

"Whatever interest I showed was prompted solely by commercial and theatrical reasons. I simply wished to advise her as her manager. I wished to point out the sentiment of the public in such matters. It mattered not to me whom she married, whether Mr. Pickford or anybody else.

"Mr. Royce and I felt that a girl of her age and wonderful opportunities should defer marriage a few years. That attitude on my part has been misjudged, misunderstood by Marilynn and everybody else. My only interest in making any statement at this time is to have my position and feeling in the matter correctly put before the public. I have been misquoted and my wife has been misquoted."

BRITAIN YIELDS TO FRANCE ON PENALTIES

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 8.—As a result of a three-hour conversation between Premier Poincaire of France and Mr. Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister today, it was decided to refer back to the committee of experts M. Poincaire's plan for control of German finances, with the request that the points upon which the British and French are not in agreement be reexamined.

Mr. Lloyd George agreed to the French suggestion regarding the collection of twenty-six per cent. of German exports at her frontiers, which would be paid into reparations funds. He also agreed to the suggestion for taking over the State forests and mines in German occupied territory.

BEFORE BABY COMES

Watchful Care of Health Necessary

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Marvelous Help

West Orange, N. J.—"I was very nervous and upset for six months before my baby was born. One of my friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it for five months now. I have a big boy who weighed almost nine pounds at birth and I do all my housework and don't feel a bit nervous or upset any more. I still take your medicine and have told all my friends what good it has done me."—Mrs. MARGARET GREGORY, 440 Valley Road, West Orange, N. J.

West New York, N. J.—"The first two months I carried my baby I was in bed almost every day with sick headaches. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me. I took seven more and I know I couldn't feel better than I did. The headaches stopped and I was able to do my own work. I have a baby girl six months old who weighs twenty pounds and is the picture of health."—Mrs. J. McCOY, 207 20th St., West New York, N. J.

Nervous and Run-Down

Biloxi, Miss.—"Just a word of praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with wonderful results before my baby was born. I was so nervous and run-down that I was a wreck of misery. I had pains in my sides and back so bad that I could not stay still or sleep nights. My husband was reading your 'ad.' in the paper and I decided to try your Vegetable Compound. After I had taken half a bottle I felt a change and was soon as well as ever. I took it the whole time and recommend it to every woman who is suffering as I was. People said that because I was so young I would never pull through and I praise your Vegetable Compound for my good health."—Mrs. ENOCH J. STEVENS, 889 Fayard St., Biloxi, Miss.

Chicago, Ill.—"I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all prospective mothers. I suffered from weakness and faint spells and had to lie down twice a day for an hour or more before I could go on with my work. My cousin who lives in Wisconsin, has used your Vegetable Compound for over five years and she came to us for a visit and she recommended it to me, saying she would pay for the bottle if it did not help me. I took that bottle and got more, as I found it gave me great relief. I recommend it to my friends and sisters and am willing for you to use these facts to help others."—Mrs. I. J. KUBINSKI, 1813 W. 17th St., Chicago, Illinois.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken by expectant mothers. It will assist them in keeping well and strong. This is necessary not only for their own comfort but for the future as well.

WALSH FLAYS TARIFF RAID OF MILLIONS

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 9.—The proposed McCumber tariff rates on hides and leather will add $110,000,000 annually to the American public's shoe bill, Senator Walsh of Massachusetts declared in the Senate today in opening an attack on the schedule.

Senator Walsh said the proposed duties would increase the cost of shoes, boots, harness and saddlery articles "for the benefit of a few packers."

Easterners Fight Hide Schedule

Washington, Aug. 9.—Proposed tariffs on hides, boots, shoes and leather, which were rejected by the House, were on the Senate calendar today with a decision before a recess made necessary under the unanimous consent agreement.

A heated controversy was in prospect, with leaders of the Republican agricultural tariff bloc urging the imposts on hides and Senators from Eastern and Southern States opposing all the proposals.

The Finance Committee majority has recommended rates of two cents a pound on green, raw or pickled hides and four cents on dried hides; with 12 cents a pair and 5 per cent. ad valorem on boots and shoes; three cents a pound and 5 per cent. on sole leather; 15 per cent. on upper leather; 7½ cents a square foot and 15 per cent. on patent leather and four cents a pound and 5 per cent. on belting and harness leather.

BULLETIN NO. 2

MILLER PIANOS—FIRE SALE

On the evening of July 27th a serious fire occurred at our warerooms, 395 Boylston St. The fire itself was confined to our shipping room and basement, and these were the only places where damage by fire and water was sustained.

The rest of our stock, located on the three floors above the basement, suffered only a smoke damage, which can be removed quickly from the cases and which in no way impaired the tone or durability of the instruments.

Our insurance adjustments allow us to now offer the unsold balance of these slightly smoke damaged pianos at a fraction of their real worth. We guarantee every instrument, and that it will be in perfect condition when delivered.

It's a Tragic Tale That George M. Cohan Told the Flapper—But He Doesn't Know It

"A Clown With an Aching Heart" for Heavy Drama He Will Be No Longer, for Next Season He's Gonna Play Hamlet.

By THE FLAPPER

George M. Cohan will play Hamlet next season!

That surprises you? Ah, but it is an old story with George M.

"I have kept my secret from the world," he told me in his hotel suite yesterday. "For years I have played the fool. I have made people laugh, yes. But had they only known, ah, had they only known."

The great American comedian looked out across Copley square and his mild blue eyes became very serious.

"I don't know why I am telling you my plans," he said after a pause. "Perhaps it is because I like your face. I once knew a face like yours—ah, but we were talking of Shakespeare.

WAIL OF ACHING HEART.

"My dream has been to do a bit of heavy acting that would knock the patrons of A-E-O-lian Hall right outa their seats, if you follow me. For years I have known I could do it, known it in my heart. But I dared not. What would they say? My public.

It was I who put the derby hat upon my head, I who leaned upon a willowy cane and took a natty pose, I who trained my feet to jig to tunes, but it was they who kept me in my pose.

"How my heart has longed for ponderous dramatics! A clown with an aching heart—that's what I've been."

"By the way, George," I interrupted. "Before we get any further into this, just as a matter of record, what's your middle name?"

HIS CLOWNING O'ER.

"Mark," answered George. "But it's over now. I've earned the right to live the rest of my life as my heart dictates. Everything's settled. Julia Marlowe is to be my leading lady—"

"Mark, did you say?" I asked.

"Moses. And I'm setting it to music. Shakespeare would have liked that. The grave diggers' chorus is a heluva dirge if I do say it. It goes like this:

"'Oh, list' to the moans
As we dig up the bones
Of poor old Mr. Yorick—!"

"I always thought it was Morris," I said.

"No, Melvin. And I'm writing a blues for the mad scene that'll be a knockout, if you are keeping up with me. It will be a sensation in high art. The dream of a lifetime—"

"Melvin doesn't sound Irish enough—"

"Listen," said George M., gravely. "Another of my secrets. I don't know what it is about you, but I'm telling you everything. Now if I tell you my middle name, will you shut up?"

S-H-H-H, THE LOW DOWN.

"Yes," I said.

"Cross your heart and hope to die?"

"Yes."

"All right." George M. looked out into the corridor to see that no one lurked about to overhear his secret. "My middle name," he said, solemnly, "is Mabel. Now Hamlet—"

But there's no use keeping this up forever. As a matter of fact Georgie's going to be more surprised than anyone when he finds out what he's been talking about. When I asked him to tell me something about himself for a piece for the paper, he grinned and winked and did a jig and said:

"Write anything you wanta, sister, I'll stand for it."

So I did.

SOME TEACHER IS GEORGIE

George M. Cohan taught me a few of his meanest jig steps, and told me that Boston was a great home-town. We got so clubby we w ere guessing middle names. His is mud.

SISTERS OBSERVE CENTENNIAL

(See Picture Page)

Sisters of St. Catherine Sienna observed the 100th anniversary of their order in this country with a solemn high mass at the Sacred Heart Academy, Watertown. Very Rev. W. D. Noon, O. P., celebrated the mass, with Rev. J. A. Jordan as deacon and Rev. J. J. Welch as subdeacon. Very Rev. T. L. Crowley preached the sermon.

Following the mass a banquet was held in a tent, with Rt. Rev. Mgr. A. P. Roche as toastmaster. Among the toasts offered were: "Early Days of the Dominican Sisters," by Rev. R. H. Splaine; "Dominican Ideals," by Rev. James H. O'Neil; "The Missionary Spirit," by Rev. James Kelley, and "Dominican Schools," by Rev. A. P. Hickey. Solemn benediction closed the celebration.

SENT TO MOTHER, DROWNS IN SURF

New York, Aug. 9.—Ella Clapp, 8, went to the beach with her parents and her young sister, and all went swimming except Mrs. Clapp. After a swim the children were sent to their mother, sitting on the beach. When Mr. Clapp later joined his wife only one little girl was with her. Ella had re-entered and drowned.

BATHING SUITS FOR DANCE HALL BARRED

Webster, Aug. 9.—Although every tendency is shown the Summer colony at Lake Chargoggagoggmanchaugagoggchabungagungamaugg, two Providence flappers came to grief when they attempted to enter one of the lake dance halls in bathing suits.

They were attempting a wicked trot on the floor with their partners when they were spied by the management.

"Outside!" was the order. Dancers present said that the girls appeared to be as much dressed as some who were on the floor in dancing costume.

ENTRIES POURING IN FOR BOSTON AMERICAN'S RIVER CARNIVAL

SWIM TEST FOR GIRLS GROWING POPULAR

The annual water carnival of the Boston American on Charles River Basin Saturday afternoon, August 26, will bring together the largest group of lovely mermaids ever assembled in New England, judging from present indications.

One of these sea queens will be declared the champion swimmer of New England as the principal feature of the big carnival will be a one-mile swim for girls.

Beside this great honor of being declared the speediest swimmer in New England the winner will be awarded a fine present that will make a lasting gift. In this connection the Swimming Editor of the Boston American would like to have entrants write him, suggesting what they would consider best for first prize.

PRIZES FOR FIRST FIVE.

Prizes will be given to the first five girls who finish. Every one of these prizes will be a good one. The winners will be happy when they display the prizes to their friends. In addition to the five grand prizes a bronze medal that will be a souvenir to cherish forever, is to be presented to every girl who swims the entire distance.

The race will be one mile in length. The Swimming Editor hopes all records for that distance will be broken. It will be a case of "fair field and no favors." Each girl who enters will have an equal opportunity. No favoritism of any sort will be permitted. Every mermaid will be on an equal footing.

The Boston American will conduct the carnival to promote this healthful outdoor pastime and incidentally to give the people of Greater Boston a fine afternoon's outing. Last year 150,000 persons witnessed the race, making a thrilling spectacle for the spectator who was there for the first time. This year the American expects an even larger crowd.

SEND COUPONS AT ONCE.

The Swimming Editor suggests that girls who contemplate entering the big race do so without delay in order that the necessary arrangements may be made. There is no red tape connected with becoming an entrant. All that is necessary is to fill out the coupon printed in the Boston American and mail it to the Swimming Editor.

Girls having good pictures of themselves in bathing suits are invited to send them along with their entries for reproduction in the American. If the pictures are only shots send films, too, so that the pictures may be enlarged.

Don't fail to write full name and address on the back of each picture, which will insure their return.

Parents should have no fear about their young daughters entering for the big swim. Children as young as nine years of age swam the entire distance last year, finishing well up with the leaders. Every precaution to protect the girls will be taken. During the thirteen years the Boston American has conducted these great aquatic events on the Charles River Basin there have been no serious accidents.

SAFETY FOR EVERYBODY.

Husky lifeguards, numbering thirty or more, will dot the entire course from Union Club to the stake boat half a mile up stream, ready for any emergency. If a mermaid tires or gets cramp in her big toe she will be lifted from the water and returned to the float at the starting point without delay, if she wishes. Physicians and nurses will be present for the express purpose of ministering to any swimmer needing attention.

Another important feature will be the preliminary examination of all entrants by a capable physician. No girl will be permitted to participate in the classic race unless the examining doctor says she is in proper physical condition for the test.

Reliable, motherly matrons will preside over the dressing tent which will be roped off near the starting point. Absolute privacy will be assured. Mothers are invited by the Swimming Editor to accompany their daughters and help them prepare for the big event. Girls who are motherless may bring another woman relative or friend to assist them.

NEW BEDFORD ENTRANT.

Among those who are expected to take part in the swim is Miss Ruth Norwood of New Bedford, one of New England's most attractive mermaids.

Miss Norwood won second prize last year and two years ago. Her New Bedford friends believe she will be one of the prize winners again this year. They hope she will be first to finish.

Exhibitions of diving by clever men and women athletes, from a tower on the float near Union Boat Club, will be given at the conclusion of the race. Other features will be arranged by the Swimming Editor so that everybody will have a good time.

Society Entertaining New York Yacht Men at Marblehead, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN

YACHTING occupied the centre of the social stage at Newport, when the annual races for the Astor Cups were held, and the New York Yacht Club made its headquarters there. The harbor was very gay with the many flags and decorations on the boats in the day time, and the colored electric lights at night. Also present were the Larchmont and Indian Yacht Clubs.

A large reception was tendered the captains by Harold Vanderbilt aboard his yacht Vagrant, and many others gave dinners. The races and gaiety will continue through this week, but the scene will be shifted to Marblehead Neck, where the New York Yacht Club arrived yesterday. The members were put up and entertained by the members of the Eastern Yacht Club. A band concert greeted their arrival.

A large dinner, followed by a reception with dancing, was held at the Eastern Yacht Club. At 9:30, the harbor was illuminated. The resulting scene was beautiful. The Corinthian Yacht Club is to entertain the visitors on Friday by a band concert followed by a dinner dance. The Eastern races are set for today, while those with the Corinthian come Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Members from both the Eastern and Corinthian clubs left last week to sail to meet the New York fleet and escort them in. Included in the number were Commodore Hobart Sears in the Constellation, Vice-Commodore John Lawrence in the Squaw, Rear-Commodore Nathaniel Ayer in the Queen Mab, and Commodore Frank Paine in the Barbara.

Harold Vanderbilt, a leader of the activities of the New York fleet, is to remain on the North Shore for the next two months. He has taken "Round Plain Farm," Pride's Crossing, the home of Mrs. John Caswell, as in the past two years, and this will be the headquarters for many gay parties.

MRS. WILLIS S. SHEPARD and her daughter, Miss Miriam Shepard, of No. 101 Chestnut street, have left Annisquam, where they have spent the Summer so far in one of the Graves' cottages on a high hill overlooking the Ipswich sand dunes. They have gone to their farm in Ponkapog, and plan to remain there until early Fall, when they expect to start on a Western trip.

Miss Shepard has become quite expert in the art of sailing this Summer, and she and her guests have entered several races. A week ago, she had for her guest Miss Frances Gibbes of Savannah, and Alstead, N. H., who is now visiting Miss Sara Apthorp. Mrs. Harrison O. Apthorp and her daughter have a lovely Summer home on the Island of Naushon, off Woods Hole.

MISS CHRISTINA D. SEDGWICK, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sedgwick of Stockbridge, has set Saturday afternoon, September 9, for the wedding to John P. Marquand of Newburyport. The ceremony will be performed at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Stockbridge, by the Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, assisted by the Rev. George Grenville Merrill.

Miss Sedgwick has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Katherine Sedgwick Colby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge Colby of New York. Her bridesmaids will be Miss Edith Sedgwick, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Theodore Sedgwick of New York, and Miss Henrietta Ellery Sedgwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick of Boston.

Mr. Marquand's best man will be Dudley Hale of New York. The Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, who is to perform the ceremony, has been chosen to preach at the American Church in Rome this Winter in exchange with the Rev. Dr. Robert Lowrie.

THE season at Narragansett Pier is at its height these days, for polo meg, their families and enthusiastic followers of the game are now in possession of the place.

A circus was staged at the Scarborough Beach Club, and the members and their guests attended in all sorts of nondescript costumes of the circus type. There were all sorts of stunts and vaudeville shows enacted. On Friday evening, the polo meg are going to give a brilliant sports ball at Hotel de la Plage.

Among the guests at the Casino, Narragansett Pier, from Boston are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Burrage, who spend the Summer at Beverly Farms, and Albert C. Burrage, Jr., who is an enthusiastic polo player.

THE coach house of the lower barn, Villacrest, Manchester, will be the scene of the sale and exhibition of articles made by civilian and ex-soldier hospital patients on Friday afternoon. Villacrest is the beautiful estate of the Walter Denegres, which they have loaned for the purpose. At four o'clock Dr. E. G. Brackett and Dr. John D. Adams will speak on "Occupational Therapy and the Work Cure." Lantern slides, collected from hospitals and curative workshops throughout the country, will be shown.

Cards have been sent to everyone on the Shore and an urgent appeal is made to "help the disabled to help themselves."

Mrs. Clarence Edwards, head of the Disabled Ex-Servicemans' Exchange, and Miss Harriet Dobson, a director of the Massachusetts Association for Occupational Therapy, are among those present. It is a chance for shore folks to see some unusually interesting work, and as an added inducement, tea will be served.

Miss Apthorp's portrait has been recently painted by Miss Aimee Lamb. Miss Apthorp is at Naushon for the Summer with her mother.

800 ON CONNOR STORES OUTING

Despite scowling skies, 800 members of the John T. Connor Associates left Rowe's Wharf on the steamer Nantasket to attend the fourteenth annual outing at the Villa Napoli, Nantasket. All of the John T. Connor grocery and provision stores were closed today.

At the Villa Napoli an elaborate program was carried out. Races for girls, for married and single men, a baseball throwing contest for girls, a three legged race, a baseball game for the store championship, and several freak races were some of the many features arranged. A miniature circus was an important one of the day's diversions.

KITE CONTEST WON BY WALTHAM VISITOR

After eight years' absence from his native city of Waltham, Richard Barthelmess of Cuba, who arrived in Waltham a few days ago to spend the Summer vacation, won the kite flying contest held in the Waltham bicycle track under the auspices of the Waltham playground youngsters, in which 100 children participated.

The contests were held under the direction of Jack Leary, former Waltham high football star, now playground supervisor in that city. Mr. Leary was the sole judge of the contest. Young Barthelmess was accorded a fine reception by the kiddies when he stepped to the judges' platform to receive his prize.

KAISER WINS COURT CONTEST TO BAR PLAY

Berlin, Aug. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Former Emperor William has won his suit, brought in a Berlin court, to prohibit the representation on the stage or the sale of Emil Ludwig's Bismarckian play, "The Dismissal." William was joined in the suit by Frau von Roestlicher, widow of the Minister of State of Bismarck's time. The court decided that the plaintiffs had a right to object to a stage performance or book portraying them personally.

BOOTLEG QUEEN BARES LIFE ROMANCE

By Universal Service.

New York, Aug. 9.—Edith Stevens, pretty nineteen-year-old daughter of a wealthy man, in court here, bared the story of her romantic life and told how she came to be charged with being a rum-runner.

"My father was a wealthy merchant," she said, "and we had everything one could wish for. Then my parents were divorced. Both are still living, but I do not know where my father is.

"I went to work. Then I met Milton Hirsch. He asked me to marry him. I thought it was a way out. But we had little money and things went from bad to worse until I left him.

"One day I went to visit my grandmother's grave. As I left the cemetery a big automobile almost ran over me. The car stopped and the man came back to see if I was hurt. It was Anthony Cassese. He said he was wealthy and single and all he possessed might be mine if I would go to Palm Beach with him. He drew magic pictures of life there.

"We spent a few days in Palm Beach. Then his yacht, Edith, named after me, came to take me to Nassau for what I thought was a pleasure trip.

"One day at Nassau the Edith went out from shore and I saw men loading bags off a larger boat on to ours. Cassese was checking them. He went away for a few minutes and asked me to check them for him. I did.

"When we got back to New York he disappeared leaving me nothing. I was arrested two weeks ago."

Preceding her testimony Cassese's bejewelled wife testified that she didn't know where her husband was.

The authorities are looking for him and say he is the king of a big bootlegging ring.

Edith is the only girl tried for bootlegging. Her husband testified to their marriage, but did not look at the weeping girl and left the courtroom as soon as he was excused.

BOOTLEG FEUD VICTIM IS DEAD

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 9.—Death today claimed one of the eight men shot down yesterday in a crowded lower East Side street when they tried to halt four gunmen fleeing in an automobile after an attempt to kill Joseph Nasseria, as the outgrowth of what the police believe was a bootleggers' feud.

He was Jacob Goldstein, a cloak maker, one of a crowd of striking garment workers in front of Beethoven hall. Three of his companions still are in a hospital, but they probably will recover.

Nasseria was out on $18,000 bail, pending trial on a homicide charge in the killing of a member of the "Bootleggers' curb." His escape from death, after he had been cornered by two of the gunmen, was considered remarkable.

His agility in ducking bullets from automatics saved his life. Two bullets pierced his hat.

G. O. P. WETS IN OHIO WHIPPED IN PRIMARY

Columbus, O., Aug. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Candidates favoring wine and beer and progressive issues within the Republican party went down to defeat in yesterday's statewide primary election in Ohio, according to returns today from more than 4,000 of the 7,836 precincts in the State.

The nine-cornered race for the Republican nomination for Governor, in which these issues were paramount, apparently was won by a large margin by Carmi A. Thompson of Cleveland, who was strongly supported by President Harding's administration and by the Anti-Saloon League. Thompson began life as a coal miner, became wealthy in oil, was elected Secretary of State, later became Treasurer of the United States and now is engaged in the iron ore business.

In nominating Thompson, Ohio failed to join Indiana, Pennsylvania and Iowa in a list of progressive victories. The outcome was considered by many as a vote of confidence in President Harding, himself an Ohioan.

A. V. Donahey of New Philadelphia, who was the Democratic nominee for Governor two years ago, again will lead his party State ticket in November, the returns indicated. He had more than a two to one lead over his nearest opponent, on returns from 4,123 precincts.

Senator Atlee Pomerene of Canton, Democrat, who was opposed both by organized labor and by the Anti-Saloon league, was re-nominated for the United States Senate over former Congressman John J. Lentz, of Columbus.

Representative Simeon D. Fess, of Yellow Springs, former college president and until recently chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee, apparently had received the Republican nomination for Senator from a field of four contestants, one of whom was former Senator Charles Dick.

Like Pomerene, Fess was attacked by organized labor. However, he had the strong support of the Anti-Saloon League.

BARE KNEES OUT OF LUCK AT ROCKAWAY

New York, Aug. 9.—Bare knees will positively no longer be tolerated on Far Rockaway's bathing beach. That's the edict issued today by Captain Thomas Myers of the Far Rockaway precinct. "I'm tired of telling them to roll 'em up," the captain said, "now I'll lock 'em up."

HURLS MOTHER INTO WELL AND HANGS SELF

South Dayton, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The body of Mrs. Catherine Sames, 77 years old, was found at the bottom of a forty-foot well and that of her son, Henry, 44 years old, hanging by a rope in the woodshed on a farm near here.

The tragedy was called a murder and suicide by Coroner F. N. Row-

MAD DOG BITES BOY AT BASEBALL FIELD

Members of the Boston Braves came to the rescue of Leon Mangierian, sixteen years old, of No. 24 Allston street, Allston, when the lad was attacked by a mad dog at Braves Field. First baseman Walter Holke drove the animal off, but not before young Mangierian had been bitten.

The boy's wounds were cauterized by Dr. L. A. Dodge of No. 1141 Commonwealth avenue. Ground keeper Thomas Fallis is the owner of the dog, the police say.

QUEST FOR PRINCESS CHARMING BRINGS EARLY ENTRIES

HUB GIRLS EAGER FOR HONOR

Free Trip to Atlantic City for Beauty Carnival Awaits Winner

Page Princess Charming! She is somewhere in Greater Boston.

The Boston American wants to find her so that she may have a free trip to Atlantic City for one week. All her expenses, including entertainment, and those of her mother, or other suitable chaperon, will be paid by this newspaper.

If you know Princess Charming write and let us know, for we are anxious to discover her whereabouts. She may be blonde or brunette. Her eyes may be blue or brown or possibly grey or black. We don't know, so please help us locate her.

In this quest for the MOST CHARMING girl in Boston or vicinity the Boston American wishes to enlist the services of every reader. Perhaps Princess Charming is too shy to admit her fascination. That's why we are permitting friends to send in the photographs of the young lady they consider most charming.

"RADIATES CHARM."

The first entry, that of Miss Lenore Zim of No. 85 North Margin street, Boston, was made through a friend who thought she radiated more charm than any person he knew.

In nominating twenty-one-year-old Gertrude L. Shelley of No. 1072 Columbus avenue, South End, Miss Mary Nolan of No. 19 Ward street, Roxbury, wrote: "The enclosed picture is of a girl who is considered charming by every one who knows her. She is possessed of the sweetest disposition I've ever known of.

Fifteen-year-old Virginia Hall of No. 130 Cambridge street, Brighton, was nominated by Mrs. B. Wheaton of the same address. She thinks Virginia is the most charming girl she knows. The Boston American doesn't care whether entries are made by contestants themselves or by their friends.

BEAUTY NOT ESSENTIAL.

Readers should remember that the MOST CHARMING girl may not be the most beautiful. Everybody knows girls who are charming and who are not regarded as beautiful. On the other hand many really beautiful girls lack charm, which is a subtle something difficult to describe, but easily recognized when discovered.

When the Boston American finds the MOST CHARMING girl in Greater Boston she will not only be given a week's free trip to Atlantic City with chaperon, but she will also have an opportunity to win a 15,000 prize and a $10,000 position in the movies.

After she is found she will be twenty-five picked from the group, christened "Miss Boston." She will go to the wonderful Atlantic City pageant, which takes place September 6, 7 and 8, as the representative of the Hub. The most charming girls from seventy-five other cities of the United States and Canada will also attend the carnival. From this group the most charming girl on the continent will be picked and she will be named "Miss America."

$5,000 GOLDEN MERMAID.

Each of the seventy-five girls will be permitted to take part in the Bathing Revue, one of the features of the pageant. The loveliest bathing girl in attendance is to be awarded a Golden Mermaid valued at $5,000. This prize consists of a small statue of solid gold, showing a mermaid reclining on a granite boulder. The Golden Mermaid is mounted on a bronze base.

Many motion picture directors will attend the pageant in search of good material for the "movies" so if Princess Charming from Boston has the necessary qualifications she may land a $10,000 silver screen job, too. All these things are worth trying for, girls, aren't they? Especially when it doesn't cost a penny to try.

FILL OUT COUPON.

All you have to do is fill out the coupon printed in the Boston American and send it with your photograph to the "Charming Girl" Editor of this newspaper. The photographs will be inspected by a committee of prominent men and women who are to act as Judges and The twenty-five young women represented by the selected photographs will be invited to meet the Judges. From this assembly Princess Charming will be chosen.

PHOTOGRAPHS FREE.

It's very simple. Don't you think so, girls? Somebody is going to win that trip and we don't care who she is. She will stay at one of the finest hotels in Atlantic City, eat the best food obtainable and have the time of her life. And don't forget, girls, that mother may go along, too! Or any chaperon you may choose. Anyone who has been in Atlantic City knows that it would cost hundreds of dollars to duplicate such a trip.

The only rules are that a girl must be between fourteen and twenty-five years of age, and live in Boston or vicinity. So long as she is declared by the judges to be the MOST CHARMING, we don't care whether she is poor or wealthy, whether she works or stays at home or if she is married or single.

Obey that impulse NOW, girls, by sending in your entry. If you haven't a good photograph you may obtain one free for purposes of this contest by filling out the coupon printed in the American and arranging with one of the following named studios for a sitting: Perham, No. 145 Tremont street; Waid, No. 168 Tremont street; Otto Sarony, No. 146 Tremont street; Ye Craftsman, No. 561 Boylston street; Bachrach, No. 647 Boylston street; Notman, No. 1286 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge; Champlain, No. 141 Tremont street, and Marlboro, No. 164 Tremont street.

SOVIET REBELS SENTENCED TO DEATH

Moscow, Aug. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Fourteen of the thirty-four social revolutionists accused of high treason against the Soviet government have been sentenced to death by the Revolutionary Tribunal. Among the condemned are several of those who turned informers.

Three of the other defendants were acquitted, and the remainder given prison sentences of from two to ten years.

Regarding the informers, Semenoff and Lydia Konoplova, and others of this group, the committee agreed to request the Tribunal to grant pardons to all.

Defiance of the court was shown by twenty-two of the social revolutionists during pronouncement of sentence, these defendants refusing to stand up with the others. This armed soldiers, and sentence was then pronounced.

Included in those under sentence of death are three women, Miss Eugenie M. Ratiner, who was the party treasurer, and whose defiance of the prosecution during the later stages of the trial was most pronounced; Helen Hanova, and Lydia Konoplova, who, in turning informer, declared she was chosen by the party to kill Premier Lenine.

SAYS HUSBAND TOLD HER TO EARN LIVING

Fitchburg, Aug. 9.—Mary Suomela of this city told Judge Chamberlin in Probate Court that her husband, Leander Suomela, told her to get out and earn her own living and that he deserted her and her minor child.

Mrs. Suomela was granted a decree for desertion and given the custody of her child.

Never Used R. R. Pass in 39 Years as Station Master

Milton, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Ezra Waelde, was the station master at Saugerties until today, when he was retired on a pension. For thirty-nine years Ezra had a railroad pass and never used it. Trains used to whiz by Ezra, but he just waved the white flag at 'em and never wondered where they went to. Never saw Broadway and when folks mentioned "vamps" Ezra thought they were talking of shoes. But now all is changed, Ezra is going on a 7,000-mile journey.

BAY STATE PAIR WILL MARRY AT JAMESTOWN

Newport, R. I., Aug. 9.—Mrs. Florence Lyman Wallace of Ashby, Mass., who is occupying the Catlin cottage on Shoreby Hill, Jamestown, and J. B. Alexander of Newton Centre, Mass., are to be married at Jamestown, probably this week.

Mrs. Wallace received a divorce in the Middlesex Superior Court on February 2 from Robert S. Wallace. Before her first marriage she was Miss Florence A. Lyman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse P. Lyman of Ashby.

Mrs. Wallace and Mr. Alexander visited the town clerk's office last Saturday for their marriage license, but as Mrs. Wallace is a non-resident, under the Rhode Island law she must wait five days from the time of applying for the license before it can be used. The wedding will probably take place at her Summer home.

Mrs. Wallace gave her age as thirty-four. Mr. Alexander, who is thirty, is a paper manufacturer.

ISADORA DUNCAN WEDS RUSSIAN POET

Like many another, Isadora Duncan believed that matrimony would interfere with her career as a dancer, and vowed to keep single. Like many another, she changed her mind.

She is now Mrs. M. Yessenin. Her husband, recently acquired, is one of Russia's leading poets. Miss Duncan, or Mrs. Yessenin, will continue to work out poems with her toes while her husband writes 'em with his hands.

They have left their home in Russia for a visit to America. Miss Duncan says her husband is a real acquisition of ideal-ism, that even in marriage she has found her aspired level.

"The Bonded Woman" head of Lowell plays this week at the Modern Theatre when a girl acquires a revolutionary spirit. Angela, the daughter of Captain Gaskell, master of one of the Marvin boats, is so overcome with gratitude to Somers, a drunken p for who has saved her father's life, that she decides to devote herself to saving him from the Demon Rum. Considering that Somers is none too dignified as the idea from the start and that Lee Marvin, owner of the Marvin line of ships is raving and decided is irresistible to Angela it is to have with her the rest of the story fairly to continue.

Even in the story Angela must guess the further and goes hard for Somers when Somers goes on equal terms to help get the Marvin boats to San Francisco first. FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

The most successful men I have known have nearly all been gluttons for facts. They want exact information. They want names, dates, quantities, etc. They dislike vagueness. They eschew generalities.

Preference has been made several times lately to the cheerful dividend news coming to hand quite often.

Perhaps it will interest you to glance at just what has been happening.

The following table gives a lot of the more important dividend increases announced during the last three months:

Dividends Increased By

Studebaker Corp.
Penn Central Light & Power.
Consolidated Gas.
American Telegraph.
Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea.
Fisher Body Corp. & Subsidiary.
S. O. Company of Kentucky.
North American Co.
Electric Auto-Lite (formerly Electric Storage Battery).
S. S. Kresge Co.
Manhattan Electric Corp.
Packard Motor Car Co.
Fisk Rubber Co.
American Locomotive.
Sterling Products.
Stewart Manufacturing.
Philadelphia Co. (increased Wire.

• • •

My prediction is that there will be even more dividend increases during the next few months than there has been since January 1.

• • •

I believe America's railroads face a more prosperous period than they have enjoyed in years. Material costs are down to a tolerably reasonable basis. Labor costs are under control. Employees on the whole are loyal and industrious. Management has increased in energy and efficiency. Regulatory bodies may have learned that to injure railroads is to strangulate business.

Any investor who has made wise investments of funds should fare better from now on.

I advise you to split your investments and thus realize the diversification. If you will tell me how much money you want to invest, I will suggest a list of first and second grade investments for you. Your Seven Metals stock is of little value. Hanger Oil has disappeared from the New York Curb and other markets. Learn to buy things worth while.

To R. M., Melrose:

Both your investments were good. Dominion of Canada has two long-term dollar bond issues that interest the careful investor. The credit standing of the Dominion is very high. With her vast stretches of unsettled lands open to incoming colonists Canada is a country whose natural resources are illimitable. In the nine provinces of the Dominion there are near at hand and a half acres of fertile land. Dominion of Canada 5s, 1952, are non-callable until 1945, and yield about 4.15 per cent. On account of the long maturity of this bond it is brought to you at a discount due to the exclusion of the issue of 1931.

AUSTRALIANS ARE FAVORED TO WIN DAVIS CUP SEMI-FINALS

PICK PATTERSON AND MATES TO TRIUMPH

By FRED C. LANE.

Captain Gerald Patterson of the Australian Davis Cup team, Allan H. Murh, manager of the French team, and Edwen Sheafe, president of the Longwood Cricket Club will hold a conference at the club house this afternoon at which the leaders of both visiting teams will name their players for the two singles matches Tuesday at the Chestnut Hill courts.

It will be pleasing news for lovers of tennis, who have been anxiously awaiting some announcement. Any number of matches have been predicted, but illness of the Australians has upset all calculations.

It was almost a certainty that Patterson and Wood would play in the doubles, but soon after landing in this country an attack of neuritis prevented Wood from taking part in the Southright tournament. For a time it looked as though the "old man" of the Antipodean team would be unable to take part in the match, but two days of practice at Longwood have limbered up the ailing member.

All indications point to Gobert as the player to take the court for France, Thursday, in the first singles match. His experience makes him the favorite. Though his teammate, Henri Cochet, has been termed the champion of France, there is little doubt that Cochet would be may for the fast flying Patterson.

Players of both teams engaged in a two hour practice session yesterday and displayed fine form. Cochet and Jean Borotra engaged in a singles set-to, and went to their work like veterans.

Both players have a style all their own. The service of Cochet seemed to be weak, but neither player showed to his best. The presence of the Australians on the next court is perhaps a good reason for the Frenchmen failing to show their winning combination.

The lanky Gobert made his appearance on the turf shortly after his teammate got under way. He later teamed up with Johnson in a doubles match.

The ailing arm and shoulder of Pat O'Hara Wood of the Australian team showed signs of improvement, from the pace he set in playing his captain, Patterson, in a singles match. Wood is a very capable court coverer. It's just such an asset that makes him one of the best doubles players in the world.

His back hand stroke, even when he is off balance, is deadly. His best trick that of bounding the ball at his opponent's feet, will make him troublesome for our players.

Patterson showed a marked improvement over his performance at Springfield. The man from "down under" has his back hand strokes working in the same order as when he defeated Tilden and Johnson last year. He is still inclined to be a little stiff in going after ground balls, and unless he limbers up in the next day or so he will have trouble solving the baffling service of Gobert.

Unless some unforseen accident happens, there is little chance of Werthiem, the tall Australian, getting into the fray. His service is excellent, but he is exceptionally slow in covering the court and would make an easy opponent for any of our stars.

The Australian team, because of its past performances, will enter the fray on Thursday as 3 to 1 favorite over the French team. The chances of the Frenchmen putting a win on their more experienced opponents are slight.

It is the general opinion that Andre Gobert will prove troublesome in the singles, but should Patterson get going as he is capable, even that one possibility will explode.

The one big question that has set the tennis world afire is to be answered late this week, when the doubles team to represent America will be named. As it now stands, Watson Washburn and R. Norris Williams are the logical choices, but many are in favor of giving Vincent Richards his longed for chance to play with William Tilden in the big clash.

Those in favor of the Washburn-Williams team are skeptical as to the possibility of Tilden being in working condition should he be pushed in the singles. Those familiar with the playing of the Philadelphian are confident that the world's champion will be in shape to play the doubles match on the following day, as he has done often before.

DORCHESTER Y. C. PLANS REGATTA

Final plans have been completed by the regatta committee of the Dorchester Yacht Club, for the annual regatta day to be held Saturday afternoon.

An interesting program has been arranged for the afternoon entertainment, which includes rowing and swimming races, also diving, greased pole contests, and the fun to be had when the married and single men, a contest which lasted over fifteen minutes last year and for which Daniel Hayes, well known yachtsman has donated a loving cup.

In the evening the club will be illuminated, and by way of entertainment a water parade of the yachts all decorated with lanterns, will be a pleasing spectacle. There will be dancing and a display of fireworks from the floats.

Pirates Make New Swat Record for the Year

The Pirates went completely cuckoo in the first game of their doubleheader with the Phillies yesterday, and produced the season's prize-winning batting rampage. The Bucs, or "Cucks," as they were for the nonce, garnered twenty-seven hits for nineteen tallies, a season's record for one game. Russell led the murderous attack with a homer, two doubles and two singles in five times at bat, scoring every time. Incidentally the Pirates copped both games, increased their victory string to ten, and boosted themselves considerably in the National League race.

RYAN IS LITTLE, BUT OH! MY!

Little Tommy Ryan, the Lynn boy is still toppling the heavy sluggers over while in the box for the George Dilbey Post of Somerville Tommy, while one of the smallest twirlers in this section, makes up in ability what he lacks in stature, by using his head. Opposing batsmen, who are known to be "fence breakers" have no terrors for Ryan who will "pitch" to any one of them. When things are breaking bad for the other twirlers on the team, Tommy has always been called upon to stem the tide, and up to date he hasn't had a defeat checked across his name.

Tommy Ryan.

FOUR NATIONS ENTER POLO TOURNEY

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Pony polo, the most expensive of all amateur sport, climbs to a place in the sun late this month, when on the polo fields of the Rumson Country Club, New Jersey, and the Meadow Brook Club, Long Island, seven great teams, representing four nations, engage in thrilling play.

Although this tourney will carry a much wider international flavor than those which have sent the celebrated International Polo Cup traveling back and forth across the Atlantic, that famous trophy will not be involved as the deed governing the International Cup restricts the play to representative teams of Great Britain and the United States.

However, other and almost equally as attractive, will be the stakes for which the teams will play and as each team to compete is one of season strength the contests will attract huge and colorful throngs and the play will be every bit as keen as the historic meetings of British and Yankee teams for the International Cup.

Four American Teams Will Meet Three Other Nations

Entered in the tourney is a British team, an Irish team, an Argentine team and four American combinations.

It is a far cry from the polo of 1876, the year the first Yankee team was formed, to the present day brand of the game.

On that distant day ponies were purchased by the carload at $20 a head. Today the price of several hundreds of the 1876 ponies would not purchase one of the spirited mounts that will perform at Rumson and Meadow Brook.

Three thousand dollars is a low average valuation for these ponies, and in horseflesh alone, the investment of the seven competing teams totals well toward one million dollars.

Modern polo is a wealthy man's pastime. Without an ample fortune and much leisure time none could engage in the sport.

Nor is the investment in horseflesh the only large one connected with the approaching tourney. The clubs have spent vast sums in construction and maintaining the fields on which the team will play; constructing stands for the thousands who will attend the matches; providing grooms and trainers to care for the mounts and maintaining a staff of laborers to care for the grounds and stables.

Because polo is the pastime of the wealthy, it naturally draws a gathering representative of the wealth of the land. The list of boxholders, announced by the two clubs discloses the names of hundreds of the money kings of the country and the daily assemblage at Rumson and Meadow brook should prove the Blue Book incarnate.

Junior Polo Series Starts

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 9.—The National Junior Polo Championship Tournament started on the Point Judith Country Club grounds today with a double event. The Army team was matched against the Princemere Perroquets and the Meadowbrook Ramblers against the Flamingoes. Eight teams are entered in the championship, which will reach the final round next Monday.

KELLY EQUALS NEW YORK SWAT RECORD

New York, Aug. 9.—George Kelly poled the ball into the right field bleachers at the Polo Grounds for the first time this season in the seventh inning of the Giants-Reds clash. Babe Ruth and Davy Robertson are the only others who have been able to get the ball into the distant stands. Eppa Rixey was on the mound for the Reds when Kelly made his prize swat.

PICK DAVIS CUP LINE UP TODAY

New York, Aug. 9.—The Davis cup committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association will meet today to select the team that will defend the historic trophy in the challenge round at Forest Hills, N. Y., September 1 2 and 4. The members of the committe are Robert D. Wrenn chairman George T. Adee, Samuel Hardy Holcombe Ward and Beals C. Wright.

With William T. Tilden, 2nd, and William M. Johnston regarded as certain choices in the singles, chief interest was centred in the doubles selection, which rests between the combination of Watson M. Washburn and R. Norris Williams 2nd, last year's Davis cup team, and Tilden and Vincent Richards, the national title holders.

BOSTON GIRL TENNIS STARS AMONG LEADERS IN TITLE PLAY

MISS MALLORY MEETS NEW COAST WONDER

New York, Aug 9—Miss Helen Wills, the sixteen-year-old California girl star will oppose Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the national champion on the grass of the Nassau Country Club. Both players won their places in the final round before the semi-finals yesterday along with six other top favorites of the field of forty-four that started in quest of the Metropolitan singles championship Monday.

In the single half of the draw with Mrs. Mallory and Miss Wills, Mrs. May Sutton Bundy another California star, will meet Miss Edith Sigourney of Boston.

In the opposite half of the draw Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup of Wilmington plays Mrs. Frank H. Godfrey of Boston, and Miss Pauline Bancroft of Boston plays Miss Helen Hooker of Greenwich.

In all instances straight sets were the rule in the advance of the favorites to the brackets of eight. Mrs. Mallory led the rest by scoring in straight love sets over Miss Marguerite Davis of St. Paul who after playing brilliant tennis for the first two matches, went all to pieces when she encountered the champion.

Miss Wills was at the top of her game yesterday, yielding only one game in four sets. She accounted for Miss Amy Egbert of Kansas City and Miss Grace Munger of California. At no time during either match was she in trouble, and she romped through both in quick style.

Jamaica Twilight Game

At the Marcella Street Playground tonight the Dorchester professionals will face the Jamaica Plain Knights of Columbus in twilight game. Knauff will pitch for the visitors with Kane catching, while Jamaica Plain's battery will be chosen from pitchers Shea, McCart and Connell, with Goss catching.

Schedule of Twilight Games This Week

TONIGHT

J. J. Connelly Club vs. North Cambridge K. of C. at Russell Field, North Cambridge. (Postponed from last night)

Medford City team vs. South Boston All-Stars at C. J. Lee grounds, South Boston.

Dorchester Baseball Club vs. Reading Town team at Reading.

Malden Knights of Columbus vs. Cornet All-Stars at Little River Playgrounds, Lynn.

THURSDAY EVENING.

South Boston All-Stars vs. Malden Knights of Columbus at Ferryway Green, Malden.

Cornet All-Stars vs. J. J. Connelly Club at J. J. Connelly Playgrounds, Roxbury.

FRIDAY EVENING

North Cambridge Knights of Columbus vs. Reading Town team at Reading (postponed from August 3).

All games must start promptly at 6 o'clock sharp.

FOUR TWILIGHT GAMES ON TONIGHT

Four Twilight League battles are booked for this evening. The Dorchester baseball club are to travel north, where they will meet the Reading town team. A second game will find the Malden Knights of Columbus journeying to the Shoe City. The third tussle will be seen in South Boston, and the visitors will be Medford city team. The J. J. Connelly club will play the North Cambridge Knights of Columbus at North Cambridge.

In order for the Cornet All-Stars to get back on the first part of the list they must defeat the Malden Knights of Columbus on the Little River playgrounds, Lynn. The second game in the league for the Shoe City lads will be the fourth of the strongest teams in the circuit league. The Kay Sees outfit possesses a good pitching staff with the Dean brothers, Gorham and Little, at the mound. Clarence Coughlin, Davidson and a few others.

The Dorchester team need not be reminded of Reading's prowess as a baseball team. Last year in a hard fought battle they defeated the northern outfit, but not until after a ninety-nine ball tussle. The Reading team has secured another good star in Vincent Norton, who is better known with the Boston Post office nine. He is an excellent fielder and batter. The Dorchester club will be forced to use all its strength to stop the home club tonight, and in all probabilities will use either Hart or Kroog on the firing line. Lee Andrews will more than likely work for the Reading town team, while Chapman will do the receiving.

The million dollar Medford city team will pay a visit to the Norton Street Boston All Stars at J. J. Lee grounds, South Boston. This should be quite some treat as no doubt the Medford aggregation is leading the league.

The Connelly club last night won from the North Cambridge Knights of Columbus was postponed until today. That game will be played on Russell Field, North Cambridge.

PANAMA CHAMP AFTER MATCHES

There's a new candidate for flatic honors in this part of the land of the brave. We are referring to Dan Mahoney, 130-pound champion of Panama, who is now making his home in Boston.

Mahoney is pacific, and anxious to take a shot at either Ray Shine or Johnny Glynn. Furthermore he is willing to battle oh a winner-take-all basis. Manager Wells is ready to open negotiations with any of the local man'makers.

BENNY LEONARD AND HIS EAGLE EYE

Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, has a bum lamp, but there's nothing the matter with his eyesight.

The title holder got one of Lew Tendler's hard smashes on the glimmer in their recent bout and Benny has been seeing things ever since.

Shrewd business man, "Bennah" has a very helpful and healthy hunch that retiring time is close at hand.

He can see the handwriting on the wall—Tendler wrote it.

The days of the champion are numbered. He cannot dodge another battle with his Quaker City rival, and until then Leonard must go out and gather the gilt.

Ever Hammer was the first victim. White or Barrett and maybe Dundee are also in line for a crack at the title and then——

With these little purses safely tucked away in the family strong box Leonard can struggle along the rest of his days in peace and plenty.

The Leonard followers need not worry about Benny's injured optic—it's as sharp as an eagle's.

FAVOR WORLD'S SINGLES MATCHES

New York, Aug. 9.—The suggestion of Pat O'Hara Wood, manager and playing star of the Australian Davis cup team, made at London, that the world's singles start, on which he decided originally in the same country as at the start of the Davis cup contest, is likely to find favor in the United States, in the opinion of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

Game on Saturday

On Saturday afternoon at the Columbus avenue ballgrounds the Sundale A. C. will play the colored Westminster A. C. The winner of these teams met the Wonders, won, 2 to 1. Goode will pitch for the Sundales.

ST. BRIDGET'S PLAY CAMBRIDGE CUBS

Business Manager James F. O'Halloran of the St. Bridget's nine of Lexington has scheduled a game with the Cambridge Cubs, for next Saturday afternoon, on the Lexington Athletic Field at 3:30 o'clock. Beach is slated to pitch for the home team, with "Huck" Cassady on the receiving end of the battery.

FIVE STARS ON BEACH OVAL TONIGHT

The aristocracy of pace followers—stars above the ordinary line—will be seen in action at the Beach Oval track tonight at the inauguration of the Fifty-six Golden Wheel race.

George Wiley, Clarence Carman, George Chapman, Vassent Madonna and Charles Vernon, the five who compete in the race last week will start.

The Fifty-six series, however, has developed such a keenness and the personal interest in the contestants when the riders attempt to pass one another.

For the amateur and professional associate Manager Beyer has arranged a strong card of races.

DEMPSEY MAY MEET ARGENTINE HEAVY

New York, Aug. 9.—Jack Dempsey and Luis Angel Firpo, the best heavyweight in the South American country, are to meet in the ring in a championship match, it was announced here today by Tex Rickard, promoter of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. Rickard has been in communication with Firpo's manager for several weeks, he said, and has completed arrangements for the match.

"I have cabled to promote the match," Rickard said after the announcement. "I have been in communication with Firpo's manager for several weeks and have completed arrangements for the match. I have seen Firpo box and he is a good one. He is the best we have met since Carpentier was defeated by Dempsey. He is a hard hitter and a clever boxer. He is a worthy opponent for Dempsey and I am sure will draw a big crowd."

Firpo's manager is now in this country and is expected to arrive in New York tomorrow. Rickard said he would confer with him immediately upon his arrival.

Firpo is a native of Buenos Aires, Argentina, and is 27 years old. He is six feet two inches tall and weighs 210 pounds. He has been boxing professionally for about four years.

PUBLIC GOLFERS ARE AT DISADVANTAGE

Somehow preparations for the National public links championship at Toledo late this this month are bringing into bold relief as never before the magnitude of the handicap against which that class of golfers is obliged to struggle. Hard as it is to see broad daylight ahead for the municipal course contingent, it can be said that a different order of things is bound to flow from the new future.

Unquestionably the finalists will be invited to compete in the United States championship at the Country Club, two weeks later and it would not be surprising if the semi-finalists were hidden as well. Undoubtedly too the ban against the payment of such players expenses to outsiders, either associations or individuals, will be lifted, as it has not for the Toledo championship, so that ability will not be reiterated to obscurity for lack of the jingle.

There is only one round on the program of the new event and that is the quality of the food that satisfies the national taste.

Districts that will hold qualifying rounds ought to be warned to avoid week-ends, when every free course is overrun by a horde of amateur players many of whom do not golf regularly anywhere and so offend every rule of the game with impunity since being debarred from the course would mean nothing to them.

If possible too attempts to hold off team matches and, especially with the qualifying round should be prohibited. Attempting to do two things at a time never pays and if the contest system really fails to bring together on the team a player who can be depended upon to be on the right of a match play round he wasn't chosen to take, the season's records would go a long way to show the leader of the team the player to put in a certain place.

BOBBY BARRETT IS SACRIFICED ON THE ALTAR OF GREED

RUGGED BOY RUSHED AHEAD TOO FAST

By JACK CONWAY

Bobby Barrett knocked out in three rounds by Charley White another victory for the Dizzy Dunedin longshoreman rather than for White. Whitney insists, should a person use of rather more of what is charged Barrett should be restrained from having anything to do with Barrett, a strong, husky kid, started fighting in Philadelphia two years ago. He developed a powerful right hand punch. He was also game and could take a heavy wallop. After he knocked out a lot of local boys, not any better as fighters than our semi-final kids, he was matched with Lew Tendler, one of the greatest lightweights that ever performed during the past decade.

No fighter, even with experience, has a chance to defeat Tendler. This is a task for a ring master like Bobby Leonard. The Tendler-Barrett bout drew a big house. Barrett's manager, the Bobby Barrett promoter, and the Philadelphia boxing outfit reaped a financial harvest.

We don't know how much money Barrett got, but we do know that he received a frightful drubbing. What chance he had of developing into a topnotch ringster ended right then and there.

Following the Tendler knockout, the Barrett money grabbers gave him a short rest, then pitted him against old, tissues down Joe Welling. Of course Bobby won. Anybody who can lick his hands up can defeat Welling.

Barrett Used As Bait to Boost Leonard Bout

Barrett was next marched to fight Charley White, nature's those persons fan' ar who being knew it was a setup for White and merry part of it, in order to make an other Leonard-White matinee attraction.

Barrett, poor kid, accepted the get-it-quick-because-it-was-his-last-chance bout now and then into the ring with White, if he had any brains he would quit fighting and repel his danger to ring work. But he will probably give the kid one of those political buzz and keep leading him to the slaughter whenever offered enough coney.

P. S.—The fighters, not the managers or promoters, are the ones who take them on the chin.

Shevlin-Ward Bout Is Put Back Once More

The Shevlin-Ward bout will be staged tomorrow night according to latest advices from the Unity Club officials. The show was originally billed for Monday evening and could have been staged as it did not rain. The powers that control the Unity Club, however, apparently feared that unless they had the best weather condi one that they would see money as Shevlin has been guaranteed $3,000. The show was postponed again last night for similar reasons.

One clause in Shevlin's contract states that he must agree to a new date in the event of a postponement. As he has been put to considerable additional expenses as a result of the delay caused by the Unity Club, he will probably insist upon being paid $3,000 for his services.

The Leonard-Tendler bout was staged on a night when the weather was not nearly as good as it was at Revere Monday evening.

Anthony [illegible] and Ward resumed their training when informed the bout was to be put back again. It is not the most pleasant thing in the world for a fighter to get himself fit for a mill and then to have a promoter put the affair back because he is fearful lest he lose money.

Captain of Yankee Girls' Olympic Team Hurt

Paris Aug. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Miss Flora Bolson of New Orleans, captain of the American girls' athletic team here for competition in the international games and champion girl hurdler of America, suffered a sprain of the left ankle and was badly bruised in taking the hurdles at the Colombes Stadium today.

The accident which occurred during the opening practice of the team caused the withdrawal from the games of the young American athletes as it was feared the mishap would keep Miss Bolson out of the coming track competition.

He was vouched for by several players, but the management demanded other proof and Tilden couldn't produce it.

DEMPSEY GETS READY FOR BRENNAN

New York, Aug. 9.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, left this city for Chicago without having improved the prospects for a world's heavyweight championship battle between the title holder and Tommy Gibbons, Harry Wills, of New Orleans.

Kearns' trip to Chicago has to do with the closing of arrangements with Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons for another bout between Dempsey and Bill Brennan, Chicago heavyweight. The pair are slated to have their next struggle in Michigan City, Ind., on Labor Day.

Kearns plans to return to this city Sunday. He will join Dempsey in Lawrence Saturday afternoon, where the champion will engage in a matinee exhibition, then journey to Boston, where Dempsey is scheduled to give an exhibition in the evening. After that exhibition Dempsey will entrain for this city.

She trusted herself with a Sheik in the lonely desert—

WOULD YOU?

Jill Carden, a beautiful and daring young English girl, brought up in a conventional home, burns her bridges behind her and lives in an oasis, far from her own race, for the love of an Arab chief. She was seventeen, motherless and much sought after by reason of her great wealth, which, however, disappeared when her father's will was read. After getting a position as traveling companion she finds herself at Suez.

JILL CARDEN spoke French, German and Italian like natives, which was all to the good. She danced like a Vernon Castle, knew almost as much about fencing as a Saviolo, shot like a George V., and rode like a cowboy, all of which qualifications she erased from her list on the termination of the freezing half-hour of her first interview with her first would be employer, who, until the enumeration of the above sporting qualifications, had seemed desirous of taking her along with a bronchitic pug to winter in Bath.

Since then she had done Europe and Africa pretty well, with never the suspicion of an adventure, and, when you meet her on the station of Ismailiah, where you change for Port Said, she was returning from Australia, with a wardrobe at last beginning to fret about the hem, and shine around the seams, a condition accounted for by the emaciated condition of her purse, a memory of good things and hours worn thin by the constant nerve-wracking routine of capsules, hot drinks, hot water bottles, moods and shawls; and a fully developed rebellion in her whole being against the never-ending vista which stretched far into the future, of other such hours, days, months, yea! even years!

But everything was capped by a still more fully developed decision to brave it out, and out, and out, rather than return to ask the help of those whose handclasp had weakened in ratio to the dwindling of the gold in her coffers.

And why did she stand by her decision?

This is no riddle, the answer being so easy. Men would have answered at once, she was pretty." And the women would guess in once too, but would add, grudgingly, the pretty one's mercy, having sampled the Coventry-sending powers of plain women in the majority on board, and the plain ones from that unwillingness inborn or inherited in every woman to admit good looks, or good anything for that matter, in a member of her own sex.

And she was pretty with the prettiness of youth allied to genuine red gold hair, and the blend of blue eyes which looked at you in direct contingency straight manner from between the longest black lashes you ever saw.

She sounds very much like a "Dainty Novel heroine." But I have met her and I know and she also had a mouth turned up at the corners, and the loveliest teeth, a nose which also turned up—not unduly and a way of walking that merited comparison of it with the lazy flop of a butterfly's wings, also two jet black grains de beaute, one at the corner of her mouth and the other on top of the left cheek just under the outside corner of the eye.

Eyebrows! Her beauty was nature's own, and she had the loveliest, longest, narrowest feet ever shod and silken housed by Audet, and as lovely out of the silken hose as in.

But all that, though it pleased her, did not really constitute her real charm. It was more the idea of strength and buoyancy, and the love of humanity she gave out that attracted young and old, rich and poor, dogs, children and the sick of soul and body to her.

The type of woman who owns the husband of a roaming disposition, or the woman eager to acquire a husband of any description who is lost, liked her not at all, failing to see that she was genuinely uninterested in other people's male belongings.

Those who think to lure men by the mystery of a tobacco clued permanently around the h[illegible] to stimulate by the sight of a glass which looks like lemonade but isn't, nestling among the everlasting cards and cigarette debris, disliked her intensely, not so much because she did not ally herself with them, as for the fact that she did not range herself against them, having even been heard to remark that the world would be a deadly dull place if everyone enjoyed the same pleasures and the same wickedness. Just three more items to add to the long list against her on this particular voyage.

Item: had she not one sizzling Red Sea day appeared with her hair hanging in two great plaits reaching below her knees? Which escapade would have escaped unreported if accompanied by the whitish eyelashes, forceful freckled and pugnacious aroma usually allied to reddish hair, but as it was, the combination of the red-gold glory with blackest curling lashes, skin like satin and the faintest trace of Devonshire lisp[illegible], created a perfect scandal among those whose locks were either limply curs ning their owner's cheeks or blinding the eye, or cached under some head covering were acquiring a taste which might with luck last out the dinner and bridge hours.

Secondly, although a penniless companion she allowed no familiarity from the men and no condescension from the women; and thirdly, her shoes gave no reason for envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness, being on the day you met her exquisite champagne colored things, her critics little guessing that the reason she wore them was that she had none thicker, and no money wherewith to buy any.

This last point sounds almost absurd, but those who know will say day back the woman with dainty ankles, pretty feet, the glimpse of white lace and a plain face stand the really beautiful countenance up above the shapeless ankle-calf combine, and the foot that in two days gives a shoe the shape of the bows of a dinghey.

So the case of [illegible] also because all this nice, wise people who loved her having stayed behind, she stood alone, her heart clamoring for life and adventure, which comes to about the same thing and which she seemed to be found so much more easily in the East she was leaving behind in the space of a few hours. The rest of her rebelling against the West, the monotonous days on the boat racing her back to England in November, with nothing to do, too much to eat, and the trail of medicine glasses, rushing, gaily, draspeptic and neurotic employers lengthening into the drab future.

"Allah! help me!" she whispered, and really meaning it, as she turned to look again at the camels stalking on into the desert, and finding herself instead looking straight into the eyes of an Arab standing behind her.

And here, I hope, endeth the dullest part of the book.

Arabs as a race are tall, most of them having a grave look of nobility, all without exception inheriting from their forefathers Ishmail or Johtan, that air of studied calm, that seldom smiling, never restless attitude, which expresses the height of dignity and gravity. There were many of them in this motley station crowd, also Bedouins, smaller of stature, and the members of the many other tribes which go to populating the great Egyptian desert. But not one of all the men magnificent though some of them were, could compare with Hahmed the Camel King, who, standing alone and motionless with folded arms, let his eyes rest upon this most fair woman from the West.

Jill was accustomed to being looked at, from the impudent stare of Frenchmen, the open look of admiration, both male and female, of the Italian to the never-to-be-forgotten look of Berlin that had seemed to undress and leave her naked in the street.

But now under grave scrutiny she felt the color, which made her even more lovely, rising from chin to brow, and longed to cover her face or to run away and hide, though there was nothing but a wondering respect in the Arab's eyes.

For one moment his eyes met hers, then as each lowered the other's white lids with their fringe of curling lashes, and turning, stood looking out over the desert, where she no longer saw the stretches of yellow sand, nor the string of camels stalking away into the distance, nor the mud houses and palmy palaces. Nor nothing of all these, but instead, just one man's face, oval, lean featured, eyes brilliantly black and deep-set under thick eyebrows, an aquiline nose, the lower part of the face covered in a sharp pointed beard, and the thick virile hair by a snow white kaikieyah, bound by a band to the well-shaped head.

A man was he, indeed, with a width of shoulder rarely seen in an Arab, standing well over six foot, in spotless white robes sweeping to his feet, a cloak of finest black cloth falling over all in swinging folds, facing however, to the last, that look of tremendous strength which impresses one so in some of the long limbed, lean, muscular inhabitants of the desert.

Jill walked over to the edge of the platform which as a rule is only raised a few inches above the rail, and after a few seconds beckoned her employer's special dragoman, who had annexed himself at Cario and presumably would only be shaken off on dock.

He came immediately all smiles.

All the so-called lower classes smiled upon Jill, from the owner of the Whitechapel to the Kaffir at the Cape. And why? Why, because she smiled when she asked a service.

"Be more dignified!" she would indignantly reply when remonstrated with about the natives. "They certainly show a varied degree of backbone in their make, and have less brains than some of us, but they are human, so I shall continue to smile if I like," and smile she did, and then turned too and ran to do her bidding.

Not that she indulged in the "fine dear black brother" views of those people who, from utter lack of knowledge upon the subject, believe that with the exception of a certain difference in the pigment which embellishes the skin, the lowest type of Hottentot has the same ideas, desires, and outlook on life as the highest born, or, as I think to be more correct, I should say, the cleanest living individual in the Western Hemisphere.

She did not approve of the promiscuous mingling of the white and black as is so often and so happily seen in London, where a servant girl maybe, will ecstatically spend her evening out under the protection of some ebon hued product of Africa and laboring under the delusion that the dusky swain is the direct descendant of Cetewayo, also totally lacking all knowledge of African history, will fondly imagine herself a queen in embryo. Instead as which she is merely the means to feed the lustful longing for the white in some Cape boy, who believes he hides the roll of his native walk under an exaggerated skirt to his over padded coat.

Jill Found Herself Looking Into the Blazing Eyes of an Arab Standing Beside Her

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—BY ANN LISLE

"I AM not, as you know, much alone. Mornings I get driven me to the office of Jaime. There I have my hours with you and like so charming Mabel, the reliable Mabel of whose fine record in Tampico I shall some day perhaps tell you more."

"What!" I cried. "I know Mabel's side of the Tampico story. I believe her version is correct."

"You doubt me, then?" demanded Rosa, interrupting with icy hauteur.

"I do not doubt you in the least. I doubt your informants. I never place my faith in circumstantial evidence. Some day a proud and foolish girl will tell you her side of the affair which cost her poor old uncle's peace of mind and life itself. I have no right to say more.

"I beg of you to reserve judgment on Mabel Storrs until the day she comes to you with her side of an ugly episode."

"Perhaps—but it is not that with which you and I are to deal. It is for Jamie we work. All else comes in good time," said Rosa with an air which I took to be fatalistic. "We return now to the no humble me—if I have perhaps your kind permission."

"Please go on. I had to interrupt. I am sorry." I explained.

"After all, my personal interest would naturally be in what you have to reveal."

"You confess it? Then I go on. As I say, I am not often alone. For lunch, for the tea, I have always the appointment. You can guess, perhaps, how it is when a woman she is attractive."

Her vanity almost upset my gravity. But with straight face, I nodded.

"So then it is only on the way to the station that I may ever be alone. I never let my partner for the tea or dance take me to the station. I like this hour alone to think. It is how I do."

She waited for approval, for applause. I smiled, nodded, and she went on with sleek self-satisfaction.

"Yesterday when I am on my way to the station there comes up to me a funny little old man. He has the face of a Lama—how you [illegible] He have no class. Worse than [illegible] is more like the little brigand I draw at first in skirts away. Then I think me, he may have some message. He may be sent"——

She looked at me with eyes that measured every flicker of pain her words lashed across my raw feelings. I tried for calmness. But as I thought of Virginia, to whom I was so newly reconciled, I had a [illegible] moment. Not that all I am trying to build in readiness for [illegible] coming was threatened by this gay little creature who was probing my feelings so mercilessly. I set my lips a bit tighter and kept myself that I might not ruin my offering by letting her read my fevered thoughts.

"I never think of this man in connection with the Harrison family," Rosa continued. "I never even think of him in connection with you. But his first words tell me who he is. He comes—how you say—shambling along after me in the kind manner of the cadaver who asks alms. He calls me 'Lady' and ask do I not know him by the resemance to you. I ask why I should, and he says because he is your father. And he say that perhaps I have a message for 'Dad Lee.' I feel that he speaks true. I ask what message I should have. And he say he can tell me better if we are not on the street. I do not care to go to a hotel or into my station with him. I tell me a 'Dad Lee' give him ten minutes—all I have before the train. He—how you say—try to prump me."

She stopped abruptly. Her eyes probed mine. Her body bent forward as if to wrest the truth from me.

"Is that all?" I asked. "Who is 'Dad Lee?'" she demanded in turn.

Landru—His Secret Love Affairs

First Authentic Story of French Bluebeard, Who Won 283 Women, Written By William Le Queux

ALTHOUGH Madame Jaume had very little property, Landru decided it should be his. Therefore, he took her to the "House of Death" at Gambais.

He had ordered their bags to be sent out by the lumbering old diligence, which passed them ten minutes later, and when they arrived at the iron gates, they found their luggage already deposited there.

Madame professed herself charmed with her lover's little country villa, and they settled down there quietly and happily, though Landru was greatly worried over money.

One day a fortnight later, he received an unexpected but very urgent letter from the blackmailer, Armand Blaisot, dated from a hotel in Grenoble, saying that he wished to meet him on most urgent and important business—"in your own interests," he wrote—and that he would be in the "Hotel-in-the-Wall"—a small American bar just off the Place de l'Opera—at nine o'clock on the following Tuesday night.

Landru telegraphed a reply that he would keep the appointment.

On the Tuesday night he left Madame Jaume at home alone at Gambais, and motored into Paris.

He met Blaisot, and, after a cocktail, the pair went for a stroll along the boulevard.

"Now, look here, mon vieux," exclaimed the adventurer, who had netted many thousands of pounds out of women, relatives to Facts of all nationalities. "I'm in a bad position. Do you recollect that woman Jaume, to whom I introduced you some time ago? I know you have met her since. Well, she knows certain things which, at all hazards, must not be revealed. She must be got rid of. Could you manage it—on the quiet?"

Landru grew pensive and protested. The risk was far too great, he said.

"Five thousand francs on the day I have evidence of her death," whispered Blaisot, one of the kings of the underworld, as they walked along in the darkness.

Landru made no reply. At last he again said that the risk was too great.

"But," he added grimly, "I might, perhaps, listen at double that price."

"Very well; ten thousand, then," replied the blackmailer. "I will give you a promissory note for the money. See! let's go into yonder cafe and I will write it out."

And so, that night, Landru, at his wife' end for funds and knowing that Madame Jaume's possessions would only realize 24 pounds or so, gleefully accepted the blood money which the most expert blackmailer in Paris had so unexpectedly offered.

Next day, at 11 o'clock, Landru again met Armand Blaisot in the Cafe de l'Opera, and after their vermouth they strolled together to a little restaurant in the Boulevard des Capucines, where they had an excellent lunch.

Landru was a connoisseur of food, and he held that famous rendezvous of gourmets in high esteem, especially when he felt money within his grasp.

"That little affair, of which we spoke yesterday, I will carry out," he said to Blaisot as they sat together. "I have had of late another little piece of business with our old friend Caudlac."

The Marquis?" exclaimed the other. "Oh! yes. Diable! he had a narrow escape the other day. He was in Marseilles and was silly over some girl, but his wife revealed. She must be got rid of. Could you manage it—on the quiet?"

Landru grew pensive and protested. The risk was far too great, he said.

THE STORY SO FAR

Landru's early life is described by M. Le Queux in the opening chapter of his story of the world's greatest love criminal. After years of petty swindling he turned his attention to victimizing women, making love to them, getting control of their property, and then killing them. Mme. Cuchet was one of the first. Landru poisoned her and her son Andre in a villa rented with her money and burned their bodies in a furnace. He then made love to Mme. Laborde-Line. Meanwhile the police investigated his activities at the villa and he shrewdly played for time, going to Lyons and notifying them he would have to be gone a week or more. Meanwhile he made love to several other women, including Nina Langlois, to whom he wrote affectionately and got her to sign over her money. His affair with Elise Laporte followed. Next he killed Mme. Heon. Andree Babe now Mme. Landru, fell into his clutches.

Henri Landru as He Looked Just Before He Heard the Death Verdict.

3 o'clock in the morning at the crossroads at the Parquere de Montigny in the Forest of Fontainebleau. You will go to the Hotel de la Renaissance, at Marlotte, and spend the evening there, and later on walk out on the road which leads to Fontainebleau, through the Forest, past the Gorge aux Loups, until you come to the Carrefur, where I shall be awaiting you; and I will then give you the evidence you require," added the yellow-faced, bald-headed man grimly. "It will take you an hour to walk from Montigny."

"I might come on a bicycle," suggested the blackmailer.

"Excellent. It would be more silent in the Forest than if you walked—and you could get away quicker," said Landru. "But you will bring the money with you, eh?"

"Certainly I agree," replied Blaisot; and thus was Mme. Jaume's murder arranged over a delightful meal, practically within hearing of a half a dozen persons at their dejeuner.

Landru knew well that if Armand Blaisot was prepared to pay ten thousand francs to rid himself of Mme. Jaume, she must possess some very great secret. He knew that Blaisot was as daring and unscrupulous a scoundrel as himself. Perhaps he, too, had committed murder, and madame could bear witness against him.

That indeed was his suspicion—a suspicion which was proved a quarter of an hour later, when Landru cunningly suggested further two thousand francs for his "assistance," and the elegant blackmailer, after a little demur, acceded.

By that Landru established the fact that Armand Blaisot, the well-known elegant, who was seen everywhere in Paris, and who appeared at Deauville, Cannes, Biarritz and Aix, according to the season, was an assassin like himself, and that the one woman who knew the truth concerning him was Madame Jaume.

Instantly he put his wits to work to profit by that vital knowledge, and began to wonder how best to use it to his advantage. But his innate cunning was instantly shewn, for in the meantime that by accepting payment for the assassination of the unfortunate woman, he at once became unable to demand blackmail from his friend.

On realizing this, the amazing adventurer became filled with chagrin, but, nevertheless, eager to gain the twelve thousand francs, he returned that afternoon to Gambais, where the good-looking woman, whose life had been bartered, was eagerly awaiting him.

On entering, he embraced her affectionately, apologizing for his absence on business.

"I do hope, my dearest, you have not felt lonely," he exclaimed anxiously.

"I had so much to do in Paris that I was unable to get back any earlier."

"Oh, I walked into Houdan this morning, and did some shopping," she said, "and since my return I have been reading—and waiting for you, my dear Lucien. I am so happy that you are back again with me."

The Autumn afternoon was gray and dispiriting, and certainly the woman must have had a rather dull time in that remote, lonely villa which Monsieur Tric, its owner, had well named "The Hermitage."

That evening, as they sat at dinner, deftly prepared by Madame, Landru wondered what secret of Armand Blaisot's the woman could possess. He felt half inclined to ask her, or to carefully lead up to her knowledge of the elegant criminal who made his money by pretending to love women, just as he did.

But would his knowledge alarm her? Would she fear him if she thought he suspected his friend Blaisot's secret? No; he decided that to keep a still tongue would be discreet in view of the dastardly plot which he had formed in order to obtain the 12,000 francs. He had taken a woman's life for a twelfth part of that sum. To him life was just as valuable as a chair, or a table—perhaps less, for, in his heart, did he not hate and despise all women as sentimental fools who would walk into any trap, provided the allurements of poetic speeches and fervent admiration were sufficiently well staged?

Early next morning, Landru, pleading that he must return to Paris and promising to be back before dark, took a reel of black cotton from Madame's work basket, and left Gambais in his car. Instead of travelling by way of Versailles into the capital, he took the road further south, and at Etampes stopped at a small ironmonger's and bought a pick-axe and spade. Then he set out on the flat open road to La Ferte, and thence to Fontainebleau.

He knew the great forest well, and, passing through the town, was soon out at the lonely cross roads, where only a byway was covered with brown leaves whirled along by the gusty wind. He drove the car off the road behind a dark clump of trees, and then, glancing around and ascertaining that he was not observed, he sat in the car and ate some sandwiches which his victim had prepared for him.

He remained there for half an hour, in case one of the forest guards might be lurking about in which case the latter would come up to him and reveal his presence. Finding as no one was about, he at last, in a deep, secluded spot, began to clear away the dead bracken and leaves, and to dig a hole with pick and shovel, in the use of which he was no novice.

He worked hard for a little over half-an-hour, making a hole about two feet deep, which he carefully covered with the dead bracken, of which there was plenty. Then, taking the reel of black cotton, he tied one end of it to a tree about eighteen inches off the ground, and went from tree to tree, walking in a circle until he had encircled the spot where he had disturbed the ground, fastening it off at last to the tree trunk from which he had started.

It was a well-known dodge of both thieves and police. If there was any intruder in his absence, the invisible cotton would be broken, and thus he would know that the hole had been discovered.

Afterwards, well satisfied with his work, he drove back the way he had come, and rejoined his victim just before four o'clock, giving her an imaginary account of the business he had transacted in Paris.

The following day—Friday—they spent happily together. In the morning he drove her in the car into Houdan, she having expressed a desire to go to Mass in the fine old church that morning. And again they knelt together—the assassin beside his victim! Surely, in all the annals of crime, except perhaps in mediaeval days, no murderer has ever knelt at the side of the woman whose life he intended to take for profit in a few hours. Yet in the case of poor Madame Jaume, Henri Landru, the Great Lover and the world's greatest criminal, actually had the awful blasphemy to murmur prayers at her side in that dark, gloomy, incense-laden old church.

In the afternoon they walked together on the flat, open road across to Thionville, to purchase some eggs from an old woman with whom Landru had struck up an acquaintance. That evening being bright, Landru proposed to drive her in the car to Paris, a suggestion which was readily accepted by the deluded woman who, all unconsciously, was going to her death.

That morning she had written to her sister, and Landru had taken the letter, promising to post it, just as he had taken possession of letters of his previous victims.

"My dear Lucien," she had said that evening as he held her passionately in his arms in the salle-a-manger of that House of Death. "Soon you will be mine—mine for ever, and you will make me a bright and happy man! Instead of growing old, I shall become rejuvenated again. I feel as if I were dazed to the warm sunshine for a spell, but only to return to our beloved France—Gambais!"

"Yes, Lucien," she replied. "My life in future is yours—and yours alone!"

Ah! Had she known how true was her prognostication!

And again they knelt together—the assassin beside his victim! Surely, in all the annals of crime, except perhaps in mediaeval days, no murderer has ever knelt at the side of the woman whose life he intended to take for profit in a few hours. Yet in the case of poor Madame Jaume, Henri Landru, the Great Lover and the world's greatest criminal, actually had the awful blasphemy to murmur prayers at her side in that dark, gloomy, incense-laden old church.

In the afternoon they walked together on the flat, open road across to Thionville, to purchase some eggs from an old woman with whom Landru had struck up an acquaintance. That evening being bright, Landru proposed to drive her in the car to Paris, a suggestion which was readily accepted by the deluded woman who, all unconsciously, was going to her death.

That morning she had written to her sister, and Landru had taken the letter, promising to post it, just as he had taken possession of letters of his previous victims.

"My dear Lucien," she had said that evening as he held her passionately in his arms in the salle-a-manger of that House of Death. "Soon you will be mine—mine for ever, and you will make me a bright and happy man! Instead of growing old, I shall become rejuvenated again. I feel as if I were dazed to the warm sunshine for a spell, but only to return to our beloved France—Gambais!"

"Yes, Lucien," she replied. "My life in future is yours—and yours alone!"

Ah! Had she known how true was her prognostication!

RADIO LIGHTHOUSE

How the radio lighthouse warns ships of danger even in the worst fog. Insert shows the type of antenna used in such a lighthouse. This antenna is revolved just as lights are revolved in ordinary lighthouses. The warning waves are transmitted only in the direction toward which the open end is pointing. By employing a distinctive signal for each point of the compass toward which the antenna is directed, ships may steer their bearings.

THE "radio search light," invented by Guglielmo Marconi, has just been put to a practical purpose which is expected to remove one of the few remaining terrors of the sea. This is the radio lighthouse which has just been erected off the east coast of Scotland.

This lighthouse flashes a warning by radio instead of by light. The "radio flashlight" is revolved, but as the lights of ordinary lighthouses are revolved, and the radio operators of ships within the range will be able to gauge the distance of the lighthouse by the intensity of the signal and its direction by means of distinctive signals.

The practical working of the system as described before the Wireless Society of London is as follows:

An experimental revolving reflector was mounted on the lighthouse, and tests were made with a four-meter wave transmitter, and a reflector eight meters across the open face. The steamer Pharos was equipped with a receiver fitted to pick up the four-meter waves with a working range of seven miles.

The reflector made a complete revolution once every two minutes, and a distinctive signal was sent every half-point of the compass. It was found that this enabled the bearings of the transmitter to be determined within one quarter point of the compass, or within 3.8 degrees.

The advantages of this type of "lighthouse" is obvious. No amount of fog can obscure the radio "beams," and a simple spark station such as is used in much like likely to get out of order, and requires less general care, than an ordinary light.

The short wave used is necessitated by the type of antenna used. Marconi, in his speech before the Society of Radio Engineers a few weeks ago, said that the open face of the reflector must be at least twice the size of a wave length in width. Wave lengths of 600 meters, accordingly, would require a reflector at least 2,400 feet from side to side, which would be much too bulky to be practical.

The action of this reflector antenna is similar to the parabolic reflector in the back of an automobile lamp. Wireless waves are much like light waves, and are reflected in much the same way.

Alkali in Soap Bad for the Hair "Use Mulsified"

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

A POPULAR APRON AND CAP SET

8805—So neat and trim and so easy to adjust—is this apron. To make the two pleasing models here shown will not take very long. Percale, drill, sateen, lawn, cambric, unbleached muslin, cretonne or chints are good for this cap and apron.

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: Small, Medium, Large and Extra Large. A Medium size requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch material for the Apron, and ¾ yard of 30 inch or wider material, for the Cap.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to you upon receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

Change of Mind

A young man, who had heard that radium was going to cure the world of all its ills entered a chemist's shop and asked:

"How much is radium an ounce?"

The chemist smiled, and named a figure which made the young man blink.

RECORD BREAKER

THEODORE R. McELROY, the Somerville radio expert, has broken all records for distance receiving at Chicago, winning the Carlton diamond medal and clinching his title to the championship won at the Mechanics' Building last May. His present feat was accomplished at the International Radio Congress now in session at Chicago, when he received at the rate of 58.5 words a minute, using the continental code. R. J. Scutter ran neck and neck with McElroy, until a speed of fifty-three words a minute was reached, when he made four errors and was counted out. McElroy did not make an error until he had passed the fifty-five word mark. Past radio receivers from all parts of the world competed.

Last May McElroy won the championship with a record of 51.059 words a minute. Previously the record was 49.50 words made by Jose Secon a Chilean. In the Boston contest the sending by machine began with thirty words to the minute and at forty words all but McElroy and his pupil Walter M. Vetromile of Everett, had dropped out. At Chicago today the sending began at the rate of forty words a minute.

McElroy is an employe of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Answers to Radio Fans

J. A. M., Danforth, Me.—The Armstrong super-regenerative set is not the kind of a set for a beginner to build and attempt to operate. Properly built and properly operated, it is unquestionably the most efficient for its size. With it you should be able to hear the Boston stations and many others, on a loop. The report that its range was 100 miles is obviously erroneous, but the blue print you saw advertised was probably for the plain regenerative and not the super-regenerative. If you have never built a set, better begin with older hookups. Your other suggestion is a good one, but full pages don't grow on bushes.

S. O., Lowell.—The range of a set varies considerably from season to season. Summer being the worst possible time of year. The power used by the broadcasting station is also an element. If you are using a good crystal, and have a good aerial, better wait a couple of months and it should go strong.

Some Flying

Sportsman—I'm sure I hit that bird. Did you see the feathers fly? Keeper—Yes, sir; and they're flying yet.

"Blowing Bubbles"

Under Our Present Social and Economical System, the Exploiter Is Generally the Winner

The author of "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" died last week without a penny. This is one of the best of the modern songs. It made its author famous for the moment. It conferred great pleasure upon millions of the human race.

The death without a penny of a man who had given so many millions of people pleasure is in painful contrast with the death of so many multimillionaires who have accumulated their fortunes at the expense of the multitude and amid their tears and anguish.

This is not an isolated instance of a social and economic system which confers its benefits by chance or upon the unscrupulous and audacious and cunning without reference to merit or to the exchange of service.

Alexander Graham Bell's death calls attention to the fact that he was one of the few men who received a reward for a great invention. Most of the great inventions which have advanced civilization have been given the world by men who did not expect to make any money out of it, and who as a matter of fact made none. The money from these great inventions have been made by those who commercialized them, who seized upon them, and by adroit manipulation succeeded in taxing the public for the benefit which the exploiter never conferred.

The same is true of the railroads. Those who made money out of the railroads rarely ever built any, rarely ever took any risk. The railroads were built of money contributed by the public, by the State and county and town governments, and turned over to private adventurers, who soon robbed the public of their holdings.

Let us remember always when those who defend the private operation of railroads on the ground that private capital took the risk in building them, that the claim is false. Public money built most of our railroads, public money took the adventure and private capital did not go into it until the adventure ceased to be an adventure, until the risk had passed away and the cream was ready to be skimmed. There was probably enough public money put into our railroads, if we include the land grants, to build twice as many miles of road as we now have in this country.

Under our present social and economic and political system it is not the benefactor who reaps the reward—it is the exploiter.

Take Care of the Mothers

Children Are Compelled to Support Their Parents by Law Whose Passage Was Helped by Boston American

Judge Murray of the Municipal Court ordered four sons of an eighty-year-old mother, who had partially lost her eyesight, to support her.

Probation Officer Knight told the court that these four sons were very glad to have their mother aid them as long as her eyesight enabled her to be of service, but since old age had recently shut out most of the light, they refused her protection.

In ancient Rome the only punishment by death, for many years, was for the abuse of a parent. If a son neglected a parent until he or she died, he was sewed up in a bag and thrown into the River Tiber to float out to sea. He was too mean even for the earth to receive him.

The law under which children are responsible for the support of their parents is a recent law, which the Boston American helped to put upon our statute books. We are glad to see it enforced. Doubtless there are many mothers and fathers who are unaware of the existence of this law. We hope such unfortunates will see this editorial and see the newspaper accounts of the proceedings against those four Scarlotta brothers, and will not hesitate to come into the court for help. A letter to the Boston American, received from such a mother, would receive prompt attention.

Collins' Ultimatum

Nothing but Harm Can Follow the Continuance of Resistance to New Irish Government

Michael Collins, head of the Irish Provisional government, replied to a representation from the insurgents that hostilities would not cease until the insurgents gave up their arms. He continued: "The choice is definitely between the returning of the British or the irregulars sending in their arms to the people's government to be held in trust for the people."

Whether or not he is strictly correct in this statement he is substantially correct at the moment. It is apparent that nothing but harm can now follow the continuance of resistance to the new Irish government. Those who wanted an independent republic, if one is destined for Ireland, will probably find it better to submit to the will of those who would compromise with the situation than to fight it out and to lose everything, together with some of the finest blood in Ireland—like Harry Boland's, whom we all knew in America and liked so well.

Tell Truth in Campaign

Mr. Gaston makes a very clear explanation of his participation in the Cohannet Mills. He denies absolutely that he had anything to do with the exploitation of child labor in the Southern mills of that name. He is certainly entitled to be believed until someone can offer proof that he has not spoken the truth.

Democrats ought to be awfully careful in this primary campaign to say nothing about each other which is not true, and which is not necessary to be said, in the interest of important truth and in the wise selection of a standard bearer.

Labor Day Will Stay

Secretary Jennings of the Boston Central Labor Union says that there is a conspiracy on the part of certain employers to abolish Labor Day. If the conspiracy exists, Mr. Jennings need not worry. It will end in a conspiracy, and nothing more.

The Labor Day holiday is one of the most distinct of the time marks of the year. We have habituated ourselves to it and a readjustment of our living turns on Labor Day more than on any other day, for it marks the end of vacations and the beginning of hard work more than any other day.

Six Lives for One

Editor Boston American:

I noticed an item in a Boston paper where six men in New Orleans were sentenced to be hanged for the murder of a restaurant owner where only one shot was fired. An eye for an eye and six lives for a life and even today we hear someone speak of German outrages and murders in Belgium. Oh, yes, the world is getting more civilized every day.

Jonathan Chase, Hero

Editor Boston American:

A few days ago the Boston American recorded the drowning of Jonathan Chase, an Arlington young man, who lost his life in a sad fatality at Dedham.

His friends feel that the boy should be accorded all the honors due a dead hero, for such he was. He was a veteran of the World War, serving as sergeant-major in the U. S. Signal Corps and received from the hands of General Pershing a citation for exceptionally meritorious service.

Mr. Chase was popular among the younger people of his home town, Arlington, and was greatly esteemed and liked by all who knew him. In Mr. Chase's death his friends lost a dear companion.

Newport "Gob" Party

Editor Boston American:

There was an article in your paper of Friday, August 4, 1922, under the title: "Newport Girls Strike Against Block Party for the Gobs," that has stirred the Newport in me, so that I must relieve my mind by writing you.

First—Why do people who consider themselves true American citizens call our sailors "Gobs" only when there is sarcasm or dislike used or meant?

Second—I am almost positive that it was not the Newport girls as a whole who objected—but a certain few—and so in everything—a certain few must be different.

Third—That people who are ashamed of, or consider a so-called "Gob" inferior, because he happens to wear the uniform of a U. S. sailor might well consider themselves a slacker when it comes to being a citizen of the United States.

Fourth—A Block Party does not mean that one must become familiar with all at the dance—but it does mean that one should do like Cinderella, go to the party with a light heart, dance, laugh and be merry until it ended—then go home to forget or to enjoy the acquaintances thus made.

It would be a good idea for the Chamber of Commerce of Newport to select chaperones from the different churches.

NEWPORT GIRL.

"Sky Pilot"

Editor Boston American:

As a reader of the Boston American, I feel that I must make a few comments on this so-called evangelist, Miss Agnes Vitchestaff. She is only fourteen years old and, from all appearances, is not in her right mind. She should be sent back to Canada and put into some school for unruly children or a "nut" farm. She is probably looking for publicity, but the only place she will find it will be in the dictionary. She says she has to smile when she thinks of Boston. Well, the poor girl must be out of her mind, as the writer visited Montreal last Summer and, believe me, compared with all the cities I have been in, Montreal has the most stupid bunch of mummies that I ever met. I will also say that Boston is a much cleaner place in which to live.

JOHN A. BARRY.

Court Procedure

Editor Boston American:

Your recent editorial touching on the question of our courts and their procedure was timely and leads me to call to your attention one of the proposals I am making in my Senate campaign for the First Suffolk District. It may be summarized as follows:

Our laws and our institutions are sound, but the administration often fails seriously. Too often our actual court procedure in actual trials becomes more of a "sharp game," with wealth usually the gainer, rather than a real search for truth and justice between men "free and equal." People are distrustful, with reason, and we hear complaints not only in the street but from those in high places. The delays, the expense, the technical issues and the actual waste tend to make a mockery of this as a government OF THE PEOPLE. That being true, let us accept it or do something, and I believe from actual experience that we should do something. I shall offer a carefully prepared resolution in the Senate creating a commission of well-chosen men and women to study and to prepare a plan for revising, simplifying (and modernizing) the procedure of our courts. Several names will suggest themselves at once for such appointments, for we have the material in our Commonwealth to take the lead, and, indeed, our judges have always been active in every such reform, for they see it as few of us do.

ROSCOE WALSWORTH.

"ISH KABIBBLE" REPRESENTS NEVER-SAY-DIE SPIRIT

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

WHATEVER the origin of the phrase, "Ish Kabibble," it has passed into colloquial speech as part of our growing American language.

With the equivalent shrug-of-the-shoulder words, "I should worry," the strange phrase represents part of the never-say-die spirit of the well-known human race.

As life for us humans grows more tense and more complex, we need to become more impervious to "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune."

Why not cultivate your bump of indifference, so that you may become fairly bomb-proof to all the missiles and surprise attacks of life?

Because, as you know, accidents will happen to the most cautious. And the most carefully calculating are as subject as the most happy-go-lucky to the envious conspiracies of the unfriendly fates.

So you would better clothe your bump of indifference with the steel armor of stoicism, and be prepared to say—and to mean—that you do not really want—what you did want and care for deeply.

You never can tell what next you may be called upon to forego. Money, social stability, place, friendship, a taken-for-granted home, a supposedly dependable mate.

Let Ish Kabibble be ready to serve you, lest by caring too much you be bowled over, your reason topple, and you be tempted to do something foolishly desperate.

Your poise and self-possession, your self-respect and self-confidence should mean more to you than any of the treasures of life or the gifts of accident.

All of these you may and should cherish deeply. They should be precious to you and you should continue to deserve their enrichment.

But, if loss comes to bereave you of however great a treasure, you remain. Don't be desperate. Set your jaw. Grin and bear it. Ish Kabibble!

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

YOURS is the spiritual way of life if today is your birthday, and no matter what hectides you, you will experience more keenly in the mental plane than in the material. You feel within yourself two personalities, your own self and the self visible to the world.

Today is one of increasingly favorable omen. By sunset you should have no hesitation in taking any steps you may consider.

Avoid making changes which shall be suggested to you by persons whose judgment you respect.

A child born today will be kind, sympathetic and extremely imaginative—a sensitive personality which must be trained with love rather than with discipline.

ARE YOU WORKING FOR BEAUTY ABOUT THE HOME?

If more persons would consider the future in setting out trees, shrubbery and flowers, a lot of time would be saved and better results would delight the eye.

Study your surroundings and take into consideration the space relation you bear to others who live near you.

Look around you and see if the dwellers in the neighborhood seem to have a general plan in mind.

If so, then do your share to help along the big scheme.

If there seems to be no definite plan, then work out one for your premises which will make not yours alone, but those next door, on either side, look better.

With thought this can be done and with better results than if you thought only of your own likes and dislikes.

There must be as broad a stretch of lawn as possible.

Try not to cut up the broad surfaces, and then line edges, cover unsightly walls and try for successive flowering effects.

August, in fact from August on, is a good time to get many things started for blossoming next year, such as hollyhock borders, etc., and think of the joy of the next year as you watch the unfolding.

SEEN AND HEARD

THERE are lots of Newfoundland folks in Boston. They will be interested to know that R. HIBBS of St. Johns is in town visiting friends. MR. HIBBS is a Newfoundland legislator, also a newspaper proprietor and editor. He says the Boston American is bright and snappy, full of features, and so well written it is in the fore front of American publications. Thanks, MR. HIBBS. Call again.

Two dizzy gentlemen were in a market district restaurant where they sell other than food. One wanted to call a taxi and could not locate the name in the telephone directory. "Here, see if you can find it," said he, shoving the book at his friend. Three reels and the gentleman opens the book to "What number do you want?" he asks thickly.

"BIG" JACK HESSE, Federal narcotic inspector, says the most unusual hop addict he ever met was a dog. It was down in Georgia, says Jack. The dog, a big collie, used to curl up beside its negro master as the latter smoked hop. The master would blow the opium fumes into the dog's face and after a bit the canine would done. During his hop dreams it would growl, whine and give other evidence that it was experiencing weird dreams.

A fish lover dived into a famous Boston restaurant renowned for its sea food. He was hungry for a bowl of clam chowder. On the bill-of-fare this stuck out at him: "Clam chowder, New York style."

"That's it," he grumbled, reaching for his hat, "in Boston New York chowder, in New York Boston baked beans."

One should learn on School street. A sour-faced woman and a pert young man hurrying along with averted faces came together with a crash the other day. "What do you think I am, a stone wall?" cried she. "No," said the flipper cruelly, "the 'Rock of Ages.'"

When you get the feeling that you have the hardest job in the world, or that life is most truly and unkind, get up real early and walk along lower Atlantic avenue. There at 7 a. m., every day you will find a horde of push cart pedlars loading up their day's supplies of fish. They have packed their cart in from Dorchester, Roxbury or other distant points. Now they will push it out again, toil behind it all day long, blow a horn, yell "fresh fish" and all maybe for a three-dollar profit. And yet they smile and are jovial as they pick out their special for the day.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON OBSERVING PLANETS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I read your articles every night, and would like to ask a few questions. When I look through a small telescope at any of the stars it looked at Mars last night) I see the round body, but also very near the star appears a small patch of blue on the left and one of red on the right. Why is this? When we look at the sky, how can we tell which is Venus, which is Jupiter, etc?"—J. V. V., Detroit.

THERE is trouble with your telescope. The colors you see are due to dispersion of the waves of different length, and consequently different color, that make up the light of the star. The trouble may lie either in the object-glass or in the eye-piece. If it is in the eye-piece, the remedy is simply to try another, but if the object glass is at fault the matter is more serious. It may be that the lenses are strained in their cell. I am assuming that you have a telescope with a so-called achromatic object glass, composed of two lenses of different kinds of glass.

If you are using a single-lens object-glass you cannot expect to get a colorless image of a star, although the "patches" of color that you describe should not appear if the lens is a good one and properly mounted. It may be that the object glass is not set square to the optical axis of the telescope tube. Or the two lenses composing the object-glass may not be truly centered. A false centering will expand the light of a star so as to show blue on one side and red on the other.

If it is not convenient for you to consult a telescope-maker, experiment yourself a little and see if you cannot discover the source of the trouble. A good telescope, when the air is steady, should show the image of a medium bright star as a perfectly round, very small disc, surrounded by one or two thin circles or rings of light. The star disc that you see is not the real disc of the star, but is due to diffraction.

The real disc is too small to be seen, and the larger the telescope the smaller the diameter of the spurious disc. The image of a planet like Mars should appear sharply defined, and in this case the real disc is seen, becoming larger as the magnifying power is increased. But owing to atmospheric troubles the magnifying power can seldom be pressed to the limit, which for most purposes does not exceed 50 diameters per inch aperture (i. e., diameter of object-glass).

To recognize the planets you should know in advance about where they are among the stars at the time of observation. The first thing is to learn the constellations and principal stars, so that you can spot a stranger, like a planet, on sight. Venus and Mercury are never seen except in the evening or the morning sky—never at midnight. Jupiter, Mars and Saturn may be visible at any time of the night, and the apparent angular distance from the sun up to 180 degrees. Mars is always reddish, Jupiter silvery, Saturn rather dull, like polished lead. Venus very brilliant and sometimes sparkling like a huge star or an electric lamp.

—Medbury Says—

Before We Had Auto Associations We Had to Get Lost Without Help

Hundreds of motorists go away over the week-ends and some of the automobile associations furnish their members with diagram cards, making it possible for them to lose their way with the aid of road maps.

These charts are wonderful. The signs in the towns tell you where you are, and the road maps tell you where you ought to be.

If you belong to the automobile association they will plan your trip for you on paper and tell you just how the roads are. They told one guy the roads were terrible, so he asked them to send him a sample to see how bad they were.

The trip was comfortable on the paper, and he didn't feel the bumps until he got out on the road.

One bird was so afraid that somebody was going to steal his road charts he slept on them. During the night they got scattered, and when he woke up his feet were in Yonkers and his head was in Utica.

When he got up in the morning he was sore all over where the detours had been sticking him.

He was reading the maps in his sleep and kept thumping his head against the wall, trying to turn to the right. Then he turned to the left and fell out of bed.

Another bird started out on a trip and pasted his maps on the wind-shield where he could see them, but he had so many maps stuck on the glass that he could not see the road.

He ran into a man in Buffalo and was arrested, but he wouldn't believe he was in Buffalo because the road map said he was in Syracuse.

He wired into the automobile association and they wired him back not to believe what the police told him, but to stick to his road map.

The automobile association told him he could make the round trip in two weeks, but the judge in Buffalo told him it would take him six months.

He had only the automobile association's word for it, but the judge proved what he told him.

One guy went to the automobile association and asked for the automobile route from New York to Chicago. The clerk asked him him what kind of an automobile he had, and he said: "I haven't got any, but I want to find out what roads the automobiles take so I can walk the other one."

He hadn't been walking two hours when he got run over with out the assistance of a road map.

If he had had a road map he wouldn't have had to depend on strangers to tell him what road he was lying in.

But these automobile associations are doing great work. Before we had them we had to get lost without any help.
